Nixon Picks Spiro As Running Mate

GOP Brass Cites 'Outstanding Job'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon announced today he has chosen Spiro T. Agnew to run with him again as vice president.

The decision eliminated any element of suspense in next month's Republican national convention where Nixon and Agnew are expected to be nominated without major opposition to face the Democratic ticket of Sens. George S. McGovern and Thomas F. Eagleton in the fall.

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon informed Agnew he wanted to retain him as his running mate at a White House get-together Friday.

The President's action quashed suggestions in recent days that the controversial Agnew might be replaced. Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and William Saxbe, R-Ohio, proposed the vice president be dropped in statements this week.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the Republican national chairman, quickly welcomed the retention of Agnew as "a much deserved recognition of the outstanding job the vice president has done."

"Vice President Agnew has done a fine job in this administration in promoting the President's programs and in communicating them to the American people," Dole said in a statement. "The President has indicated all along that he did not want to break up a winning combination."

Ziegler reminded reporters at a hurriedly summoned biefing that Nixon said last January in an interview he believed "you should not break up a winning combination."

Ziegler said Nixon also informed former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally of his decision at dinner Friday night at Camp David where Connally was an overnight guest. The former Texas governor —a Democrat —was frequently mentioned in speculation as a replacement for Agnew.

Agnew was already on the campaign trail. He was scheduled to depart later today for Portland, Ore., and a string of Republican fund raising events in the Northwest.

Ziegler said Nixon also informed key Republicans of his decision, including GOP national chairman Robert A. Dole; his campaign chairman, Clark McGregor; and Senate minority leader Hugh Scott.

Nixon also informed former Attorney General John M. Mitchell of his decision. He said that Mitchell, who bowed out as Nixon's campaign manager recently, is "still playing an active role" in promoting Nixon's re-election campaign.

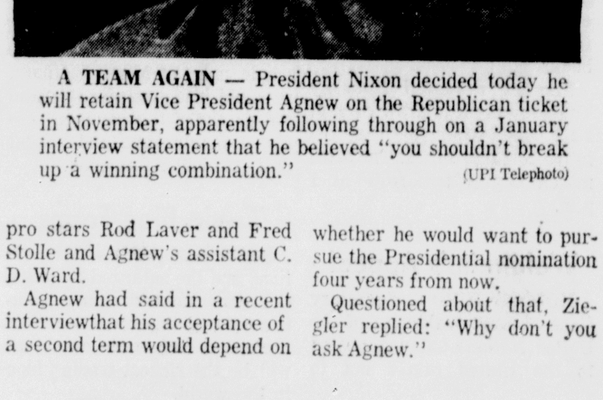

Ziegler said that Nixon had been considering the vice presidential possibilities for several weeks and made his definite decision to keep Agnew on the ticket after the Democratic national convention in Miami Beach last week.

He said that Nixon had wanted to advise GOP delegates before their convention, Aug. 21-23, also in Miami Beach.

Earlier in the day, Agnew played tennis on the White House courts with Australian pro stars Rod Laver and Fred Stolle and Agnew's assistant C. D. Ward.

Agnew had said in a recent interviewthat his acceptance of a second term would depend on whether he would want to pursue the Presidential nomination four years from now.

Questioned about that, Ziegler replied: "Why don't you ask Agnew."

A TEAM AGAIN — President Nixon decided today he will retain Vice President Agnew on the Republican ticket in November, apparently following through on a January interview statement that he believed "you shouldn't break up a winning combination."

Parents Take Over School

About 25 Marin City residents took over the vacant Manzanita School in that community today and refused sheriff's deputies' requests to leave.

The deputies left quietly, and residents continued to clean up the facility — mopping, sweeping broken glass and moving out cartons of old papers and books.

A spokesman said the resident group planned to prepare the vacant schoolrooms for use in September by the Marin City Learning Center. The center is a private school started last September by Marin City parents who were dissatisfied with the education their children were receiving in the Sausalito School District.

Representatives of the center said they decided to occupy the school without permission because the district had refused several requests to use the facility.

Manzanita has been closed since June 1971, when the district decided to send all its students to Martin Luther King and Bayside schools in Sausalito.

The learning center again will petition for use of the school at the Sausalito School District board meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the district office.

Sheriff's Lt. Robert Gaddini told the parents that the school district "would rather not have you in this building. What you do here may hamper your chances of obtaining this school on Monday night," he said.

Betty Times, district trustee who arrived at the school shortly before the takeover began, promised to do all she could to see that Manzanita is put in condition so it can be used by the Marin City community.

District officials said they have not granted the learning center's previous requests because they do not have legal authority to turn the facility over to a private group, even a school.

The cleanup began about 10 a.m. as residents entered the building though a broken glass door. Most of the building's windows and doors have been vandalized since the building was vacated.

Deputies stood by, but made no move to evict or arrest the Marin City cleanup crew.

Supplies Halted, Red Road Barrier Defied

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist troops trying to outflank South Vietnamese paratroopers attacking Quang Tri city blocked Highway 1 today and halted supply shipments to front line troops, field reports said.

UPI correspondent Donald A. Davis said five South Vietnamese vehicles managed to get beyond a 500-yard section of the highway cut off by the North Vietnamese. All five—an armored personnel carrier, a jeep and three trucks—detoured behind government lines around the area.

Davis said at least 50 army trucks carrying ammunition for troops in Quang Tri were stalled at the Phong Dien bridge 16 miles northwest of Hue because of the blockaded road. He said Southietnamese commanders estimated that 20 Communist soldiers were blockading the road in the area with rifle, machine gun and rocket grenade fire.

Military sources said three North Vietnamese battalions were in the area west of the highway, 31-2 miles south of the My Chan river and about 15 miles south of Quang Tri city. The Communists were firing on the highway from bunkers about 100 yards west of the road, Davis said.

South Vietnamese infantrymen tried to close in on the bunkers from behind a curtain of artillery fire, with shells crashing 50 feet ahead of them. To move one company forward, the artillery fired white phosphorus shells so the infantry could advance behind the smoke, Davis said.

In the Central Highlands, UPI reporter Ed Bassett said the last Communist resistance ended before noon today in the district town of Bong Son and South Vietnamese infantry occupied the community of 25,000 persons.

Bong Son, 290 miles north of Saigon, had been in Communist hands since April 29. It was among 16 district towns overrun by the Communists in their offensive which began April 1. Two of the towns have been recaptured.

UPI reporter Ted Kurrus said traffic was cut on Highway 1 31-2 miles south of the My Chanh river at dawn when Communist gunners began lobbing mortar shells onto the road.

Catholic-Area Fight; IRA Claims Bombings

BELFAST (UPI) — British troops fought their way into Belfast's Roman Catholic areas today, seizing weapons and explosives and arresting members of the Irish Republican Army. The IRA claimed responsibility for bombings and shootings which killed 16 persons in the city in a 24-hour period. (See picture, page 2.)

The army said at least five persons died Friday night and today in the continuing violence between British troops and Northern Ireland's Protestant majority and Catholic minority.

The deaths raised to at least 469 the number killed in the province in the past three years of religious strife.

At least 62 persons were arrested as 1,500 troops moved in and occupied the Catholic sections of Ballymurphy, Markets, Lower Falls, Ardoyne and Andersontown, the army said.

Gunmen fired about 1,000 shots at the troops, but failed to inflict any casualties, a spokesman said.

The body of a Catholic, Joseph Downey, was found in the Markets area as the troops moved through, but army spokesman said it was not known how he died.

In other bloodshed during the night, three men shot and killed Joseph Rosatto, a Catholic in his 40s, when he answered a knock at his door.

Police said the bodies of a young unidentified couple were found today in a stolen car in the Forth River district and the body of an unidentified man was found in the Liffey Street area.

Army spokesmen said the troops recovered large quantities of explosives, hand grenades and rifles in their move through the Catholic areas.

The army operations came a few hours after Secretary of State William Whitelaw said, "I am going to make an immediate and clear response to the attacks of innocent people during the last 24 hours."

Whitelow and Britain's defense secretary, Lord Carrington, conferred with security chiefs in Belfast into the early morning hours before today's operations.

"Her majesty's government is determined that men of violence will not succeed," Whitelaw said. "This course will lead them to total disaster. The sooner they realize it, the better."

He said he did not rule out

Food Price Rise 'Lowest In 4 Years'

WASHINGTON (UPI — Retail prices for food in a typical family market basket rose only 1.7 per cent in 1971, the smallest annual gain in four years, an Agriculture Department report showed today.

It was the second straight day of encouraging economic news.

The administration issued reports Friday which showed that inflation was slowed considerably during the past three months while the nation's total output —measured by the Gross National Product (GNP) —rose sharply to its highest level since the fourth quarter of 1965.

Herbert Stein, Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said it was "the best combination of economic statistics released in this decade." He said the administration was "exuberant" over the reports, which he termed "enormously encouraging" in the battle to stimulate economic growth while curbing inflation.

Stein predicted further strong economic expansion through the end of the year, continuing declines in unemployment, a leveling off if not an actual decline in meat prices, and workers' "real" earnings outlacing inflation.

Assistant Commerce Secretary Harold C. Passer announced that the economy grew at "a prodigious rate" in the last quarter.

McGovern Challenges Nixon To TV Debates

CUSTER S.D. (UPI)—Sen. George McGovern today challenged President Nixon to a series of face-to-face nationally televised debates, and urged Congress to act quickly on legislation to make the confrontation possible.

McGovern, before gathering his staff together at Sylvan Lake for the first in a series of strategy sessions, urged Nixon to use his "extensive influence on Capitol Hill" to win approval of legislation suspending the present equal time requirements of the Federal Communications Act.

Action is necessary on this legislation, he said, to permit candidates of the two major parties to debate without being joined by fringe candidates.

"We are approaching one of the great watershed elections in U.S. history, with the public to decide whether the nation is at last going to turn down excessive military spending and come to grips with basic tax reform, the welfare mess, and a number of other problems long overdue to be acted on," McGovern said.

"The American people are entitled to have the two candidates submit to rigorous probing by each other on the direction the country is to choose for the next four years."

McGovern said he was unsurprised by news that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew will be on the ticket with President Nixon again.

"I don't think it makes a lot of difference," he said when asked whether Agnew or former Treasury Secretary John Connally would have been the stronger opponent.

McGovern went into the meeting with campaign advisers where the key question was whether to concentrate campaign money and organization on traditional Democratic strongholds or to broaden the scope in hopes McGovern will appeal to regions that had been handed to the Republicans in past years by virtual default.

McGovern returned here with a plane load of advisors Friday following a one day trip to Washington for a vote on the minimum wage bill.

McGovern's team reveled in the cool, clear weather of the Black Hills, passing a football around in front of the rustic lodge.

They were staying in tourist cabins off a rocky hillside surrounding the mirror-like Sylvan Lake.

Those present included the 33-year old director of McGovern's organization, Gary Hart; the senator's top political advisor, Frank Mankeiwicz; and the chairman of the Democratic National Committee Mrs. Jean Westwood.

Mrs. Westwood's predecessor, Lawrence O'Brien, who was named campaign director this week, was not here.

There seemed to be general agreement among those present that his role in the campaign will be limited to organizing regular democratic office holders, county leaders, and other veteran politicians who have been reluctant to associate with the newcomers.

The campaign picture that seemed to be emerging was of a two-mule plow—with Hart pulling the nationwide team of political novices who won McGovern the nomination, and O'Brien tugging at the regulars.

Mankeiwicz expressed confidence the system would work and there would be no clash with the regulars when the hard work of registering voters and getting them to the polls begins.

A BIT OF ADVICE

A British soldier in Londonderry heeds the sign — but the sign wasn't intended for him. It was painted for local supporters of the Irish Republican Army. In violence-torn Northern Ireland, however, it's good advice for everyone. The heaviest bombing in 10 months was reported yesterday in Belfast. See story, page 1. (UPI Telephoto)

Warning On State Jobless Check Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Reagan administration says it has been warned a Los Angeles County Superior Court decision, if upheld on appeal, could halt distribution of unemployment insurance checks to Californians.

The state Department of Human Resources Development said it has been warned by the U.S. Labor Department that the court decision would place California's unemployment insurance program out of conformity with federal requirements.

The state agency said the Department of Labor then could cut off more than $36 million a year in federal funds that go to HRD to finance administration of its unemployment insurance offices and its employment service.

Tom Griffin, chief of HRD's legal section, said Friday that "the only thing we could do for the lack of administrative money is to close the unemployment insurance offices. This would prevent distribution of the checks."

Griffin said the decision does not affect the money collected to pay jobless benefits but only the funds used to operate the unemployment insurance program.

Griffin said the administrative funds could be cut off if the court decision is upheld or if the law is not changed by the legislature. He said the state is readying an appeal of the decision.

HRD sponsored legislation to remove the conflict with federal law but it was killed earlier this month by the Senate Industrial Relations Committee.

In the decision last February, Judge Robert A. Wenke ruled HRD could not disqualify a claimant for UI benefits because he quit his last job without good cause or was fired for misconduct unless the employer notified HRD of the termination reasons within five days after the employment ended.

HRD said the Labor Department warned the court decision violates two federal requirements.

One is that benefits must be paid only to those persons who are involuntarily unemployed and not to those who are responsible for their own unemployment. The second requirement is that eligibility must be determined by HRD when a claim is filed and cannot be determined solely by the employer.

Switching Error Caused 2-Train Wreck, Killing 76

SEVILLE, Spain (UPI) — Stretched out in Our Lady of the Olives Church at the town of Lebrija lay the bodies of 76 persons in flickering candlelight. A few miles away workers searched for more bodies in the wreckage of one of Spain's worst train wrecks.

A spokesmen for RENFE, The Spanish National Railroads, said more than 100 persons were injured when an express train and a local shuttle train smashed into each other.

Alfredo Sanchez Bella, Minister for information and tourism, sent condolences to the families of the victims and said, "the accident resulted because of human error."

Railway officials said the collision occurred when the commuter train was inadvertently switched over to the main line between Cadiz and Madrid and into the path of the speeding express. The engineer of the local train ignored a red light. He was among the dead, officials said.

"This is certainly the worst train disaster in Spain in the last two decades," said a RENFE spokesman.

Most of the dead were Spanish Marines from San Fernando Naval Base near Cadiz. Sixty of them were in the commuter train and only three survived.

"We were so happy, you know?" said one of the Marine survivors.

"It happened as we were singing "Porque te vas, amor? (Why Are You Going, My Love?). There was a terrific noise and all the seats in the coach crumpled and twisted in a confused tangle. The next thing I knew I was on the ground outside the car."

Juan Gomez Vidal, a farmer, was working in a field when the trains smashed together.

"It was horrible," Gomez said. "I was 100 meters from where it happened. I will never forget it. All you could see was blood everywhere.

"We began to pull out those that we could and give them water, which was all we had. Some of my companions were crying. Then the ambulances began to arrive."

August Hearings Slated For 2 Skyjack Suspects

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A stateless Bulgarian involved in the July 5 hijacking of a Pacific Southwest Airlines jet in which three persons were killed, was denied bail Friday. A young Vietnam veteran who attempted a skyjacking of a PSA plane a day later was found by a court-appointed psychiatrist not competent to stand trial.

Both cases came before U.S. District Judge William T. Sweigert who set hearings for early next month.

Lubomir Peichev was charged with aiding and abetting aircraft piracy, a capital offense, and two counts of conspiracy.

He is accused of having waited at a Canadian airstrip for the two hijackers, both Bulgarian refugees, to bring the PSA plane from San Francisco with $800,000 ransom. The other two were shot to death in the plane by FBI agents and a passenger died in the gunfight.

Assistant Public Defender John W. Keker, representing Piechev, sought his client's release on $50,000 bail. He said Peichev is stateless and doesn't have a passport.

Sweigert denied bail. He declared Peichev a flight risk who potentially would pose danger to the community if at large.

Francis M. Goodell, 21, who gave himself up at Oakland after collecting $455,000 ransom, was examined on order of a magistrate by Dr. Bruce C. Johnson.

Johnson said in his report to Sweigert the young man was not able to fully understand the nature of his act or participate in his defense. Sweigert said he would hold a full hearing on the matter Aug. 3.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Spassky Rests

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — World chess champion Boris Spassky has fled to the seclusion of a downtown penthouse and cancelled all appointments amid reports from Russian sources that he is irritated with the American challenger, Bobby Fischer.

Rev. William Lombardy, Fischer's second, said Friday, "Spassky is so ravelled that if he doesn't come around by the sixth game Bobby is going to steamroll him. Spassky has not been himself here. The match Sunday will go two ways — either he will break down or find hidden reserves and come back."

Fischer defeated Spassky Thursday night to draw even at 2-1-2 points after five matches in the 24-game series. The sixth match begins tomorrow at 1 p.m.

Waldheim's Appeal

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations today appealed to the United States not to bomb the dikes of North Vietnam and said such bombing would cost thousands of lives.

"I firmly hope and appeal that this will be avoided," Waldheim said at a news conference that completed his five-day official visit to the Soviet Union.

Waldheim said he did not know whether reports that such bombing already had occurred were true.

The United States has repeatedly denied such reports coming from Hanoi.

"I am personally very concerned with these bombing reports, deeply concerned.

"If these dikes were bombed it would lead to flooding of the whole plain of North Vietnam, it would lead to a disaster and the deaths of thousands of people. I firmly hope and appeal that this will be avoided."

Trade Bloc Forms

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Five nations and the enlarged 10-nation Common Market signed treaties today giving birth to a West European free trade area that will be the richest trading bloc in the world.

A 16th nation, Finland, plans to sign later when a new majority government is installed in Helsinki.

The signing concluded eight months of negotiations that ended two days ago. Trade experts labored until just before dawn today making last-minute changes in the treaty text.

The free trade area will not replace the Common Market. Rather, it will unite the market and six other West European nations in a program to eliminate almost all tariffs between them, while maintaining tariffs against the rest of the world, including the United States.

Vice Rings Broken

NEW YORK (UPI) — A man described as the leader of the late Vito Genovese's crime family and six other men have been arrested in a crackdown of two major gambling rings.

Police sources said the arrests took place Thursday and Friday on indictments handed up in June by a New York county grand jury.

One ring was run by Benjamin Genetempo of Eastchester, N.Y., police sources said. He was described as a top figure in the crime family Genovese had operated, the same ring that was controlled by Thomas Eboli, who was murdered in a gangland killing Sunday in Brooklyn.

The other ring was run by Hyman (Doc) Silverblatt of Astoria, Queens, the sources said. Between them, the two rings did $40 million business a year.

Chou's Invitation

TOKYO (UPI) — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai today officially invited Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan to visit Peking at the "earliest possible date" to discuss making relations between the two countries more normal.

Chou's invitation was delivered to Tanaka by Kozo Sasaki, former chairman of the Japan Socialist party, who returned from China Friday night.

"My impression was that the prime minister will go to Peking," Sasaki told newsmen after he met Tanaka.

Sasaki quoted Tanaka as saying that "I will send a cable direct to Premier Chou En-lai after the government works out a timetable on my visit."

Highly placed sources reported Friday that Tanaka plans to visti Peking between September and November, accompanied by Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

Gas Tax Bill Amended In Senate

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill lowering the newly-imposed state sales tax on gasoline was approved Friday by the Senate after members were told of an "enormous public outcry" against a tax on a tax.

The Senate accepted on a 33-0 vote a conference committee report amending the bill so that after Oct. 1 the sales tax can be applied only to the base price of gasoline, exclusive of the 11-cents-per-gallon state and federal excise tax.

The action was the latest wrinkle in the measure by Senate leader James R. Mills, D-San Diego, that originally was only intended to tidy up details of the new sales tax extension law but quickly fell into controversy.

Plasterers Reach Agreement In Strike

Plasterers Union negotiators reached a tentative contract agreement with the Plastering Contractors Association last night, apparently ending a three-day strike that hit Marin, Sonoma and other Northern California counties.

The action means that stucco plastering work on the McKeon tract in the San Rafael Canal area and exterior work on several Novato homes would resume pending ratification of the agreement by union members on Monday night, according to a union spokesman.

Work on the Marin projects had been halted Tuesday after members of the Plastarers Union walked out in a dispute over wages, benefits and contract length. There are about 42 union members in Marin.

Federal mediator Jerry Finley of Larkspur said union negotiators, representing plasterers in 13 Northern California counties, tenatively agreed to a three-year pact. Other terms weren't disclosed pending Monday's vote.

Counties affected, besides Marin and Sonoma, were Lake, Mendocino, Napa, Solano, Shasta, Modoc, Humboldt, Siskiyou, Trinity, Tehama and Lassen.

Convict Bludgeoned, Then Dies

A San Quentin prisoner hit on the head by a blunt object while inmates were watching television last night died at 5:55 a.m. today in the prison hospital.

Prison officials identified the dead imate as Donald Peter Hatton, 28, of Maryland, who was serving five years to life imprisonment for robbery.

"He was found on the third tier of the north block with his head bashed in about 9:15 p.m. last night," according to James V. Fitzgerald, procurement service officer.

Other inmates in the minimum security block were watching television on the first floor at the time, he said.

No suspect has been apprehended nor has a weapon been found, although prison officials think that a piece of pipe may have been used in the assault, Fitzgerald said.

Hatton was convicted June 23, 1970, in Los Angeles and entered San Quentin in August of that year, Fitzgerald said.

Man Runs Into Car, Hospitalized

A pedestrian was struck and injured by an automobile while running across Highway 101 north of Manuel T. Freitas Parkway in Terra Linda at 2:45 p.m. yesterday, according to the California Highway Patrol.

William Matney, 20, of Fortuna, Humboldt County, was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with abrasions on the back, forehead and arms.

Officers said Matney told them he wanted to get from the west to the east side of the freeway so he could hitchhike northward. He ran into the path of an auto driven by Arlene Miles, 37, of 91 Santa Maria Drive, Novato.

'Part-Time' Jail Term

Robert Eugene Pickens, 26, was ordered yesterday to spend two days a week in Marin County Jail for the next six months for possessing cocaine.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court also placed him on probation for five years on the felony count and fined him $100 on a misdeanor count of drunken driving.

Felony counts of possessing marijuana and amphetamines were dismissed in April when Pickens pleaded guilty in exchange for the sentence he received yesterday.

He was arrested Dec. 20 by a California Highway Patrol officer on Highway 101 near the Lucky Drive turnoff in Greenbrae. The officer reported finding drugs in two film cannisters and a bottle of pills in Pickens's pockets.

Pickens, who subsequently has been arrested twice on suspicion of drunken driving, has not had a driver's license since 1970, according to his probation officers.

The two-day-a-week sentence was to enable Pickens to keep a grocery clerk job he has held for 10 years.

Council To Meet

The San Rafael City Council will hold a special meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in city hall to consider the ballot argument for the Sept. 19 $2.25 million bond election for open space, City Clerk Marion A. Grady announced.

Boys Club Still Shy Of Fund Goal

The Novato Boys Club, willed half of a downtown motel, still needs funds immediately, according to president Edward T. Ghirardo.

Directors learned Thursday night that the will of Clara Meyers, giving the club half of the Mission Lodge motel at Highway 101 and Diablo Avenue, wouldn't be settled for at least six months and probably longer.

Ghirardo said funds are needed to pay for land and build a clubhouse on Wilson Avenue opposite Sinaloa Junior High School. The club steering committee has said the arganization probably would use the motel property as a source of operating revenue.

The fund drive has passed the $100,000 mark, but is about $44,000 short of the $150,000 goal, Ghirardo said.

Annual operation of the club is expected to cost from $42, 000 to $50,000, he said. Operational funds are slated to come from renewal of pledges and donations, revenue from benefits by various organizations, revenue from the club's thrift shop, and bequests.

Directors announced that an appreciation dinner, for a crew of about 100 persons who worked on the house that was constructed and sold for the benefit of the club, will be held Aug. 11 at Shipwreck Pete's. The dinner is a "gift in kind" from Mr. and Mrs. Pete Lind, the proprietors.

Directors also reported they are seeking space for the club office, which must move from its location at 867 Sweetser Avenue by Aug. 15.

'Bierce- To Play Once Next Week

The Independent-Journal erred yesterday in dates next week for "Bierce Takes On The Railroad," currently playing in repertory at College of Marin's Theater III in San Anselmo.

The play will be performed only once next week —Saturday night — and not Friday and Saturday nights as listed in a review of the play.

Ex-Candidate Noble Jailed: Bad Check

A twice-unsuccessful candidate for the Reed School District board was arrested by Tiburon police yesterday on suspicion of issuing a bank check with intent to defraud.

Marcus Cicero S. Noble III, 40, of 1 Antonette Drive, Tiburon, who told the Independent-Journal today that the "whole matter was the result of a clerical error," was booked into Marin County Jail on the misdemeanor complaint last night and released on $500 bail to appear Wednesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Noble said he had written a $50 check which didn't clear a local bank several months ago. He said he had "taken care of the matter with sheriff's officers" but "evidently there was some confusion when Tiburon's autonomous force took over and the old bench warrant was left laying around," Noble said.

Noble, who heads a management consultant firm in San Francisco, ran for a seat on the Reed School District board in 1971 and was defeated in a second attempt last June.

3-Ferry Pact Is Recommended

A committee of Golden Gate Bridge District directors yesterday unanimously recommended award of a $12.6 million contract to build three ferryboats.

The low bid by Campbell Industries of San Diego was more than $4 million above the estimate. The building and operating committee, however, accepted staff explanations that the growing cost of labor accounted for most of the $4 million difference.

Ferry transit manager Stanley M. Kowleski said some price reduction may be negotiated by allowing a four-month delay of the first ferry to April 1974. The committee recommendation will go to the full board on Aug. 11.

The recommendation was subject to federal approval of a grant covering two-thirds of the $12.6 million.

4 Who Charge Job Bias Gain Panel Support

Four black members of the Marin County road crew, who charged they had been idscriminated against when passed over for promotions, have won support of the Marin County Personnel Commission.

The commission on Thursday unanimously recommended that county supervisors upgrade each of the men to a higher classification and that future "oral boards" for road crew promotions include one minority race member.

The four are Allen D. Wilson and Davidson Johnson, recommended for promotions from maintenance man II to maintenance man III, and John C. Smith and Luther Norwood, recommended for promotion from maintenance man I to maintenance man II.

In 1969, the four were reclassified downward during a shakeup of the road crew. They subsequently were passed over for promotions back to their original classifications.

Planners Will Try Again On Marinview

The Marin County Planning Commission will try again Monday to reach a decision on the proposed fifth developmet unit at Marinview, a subdivision of single-family residences and townhouses above Tamalpais Valley.

The meeting, scheduled for 9 a.m. at the civic center, also will include discussion of the controversial Martinelli Farms project north of Point Reyes Station.

Some 200 residents of the first four Marinview units have protested the new 46-unit addition on grounds of increased traffic, aesthetics and poor soil conditions.

The planning commission last month failed to reach a decision on the addition, calling for more staff study on soil conditions — which a geological study said was unstable.

The planning and public works staffs since have concluded that soil conditions pose no great threat if proper engineering is done.

The Martinelli farms project, meanwhile, is expected to be opposed by conservationists who in May persuaded the county board of supervisors to reject development plans.

Supervisors said the plans should be revised showing more open space on the 260-acre parcel, which once was part of the Elmer Martinelli Ranch, one mile north of Point Reyes Station.

The developer has revamped the plans and now shows 68 homesites instead of the original 51 requested, but has left more open space by moving the homesites closer together.

THE SELLING OF THE ARMY

With a Nike-Hercules missile in tow, the Army set up a recruiting station yesterday in San Rafael's Northgate Shopping Center, hoping to interest youth in the rewards of what has been billed as "today's Army." One who was interested — although in behalf of his son — was Pen Johnson of San Rafael (left), chatting with S/Sgt. Charles Tyson. Sgt./1c James E. Bowles manned the table. Although the new pitch is that "Today's Army Wants to Join You," a hirsute Independent-Journal reported was told that a haircut and a shave would be in order before today's Army would want to join him.

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidant, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, clean air.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches, and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, while the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

ECONOMY

flation, the GNP grew in "real" terms by 8.9 per cent during April, May and June, Passer said. The GNP is the market value of all the goods and services that Americans produced and is considered the most comprehensive measurement of the state of economy.

Passer also said that the annual rate of inflation dropped 2.1 per cent —the lowest since the fourth quarter of 1965.

The Labor Department, in separate reports, said that consumer prices rose only 0.2 per cent in June on an absolute basis and 0.1 per cent when seasonally adjusted. The average workingman's wages went up faster than prices last month, the department said.

Stein said the combination of encouraging statistics "confirm the picture of a vigorously rising economy with a declining rate of inflation and rising real incomes for workers" and probably improved the prospects that wage and price controls can safely be ended sometime in the not-to-distant future.

The food prices report issued today, which measures only farm-produced foods and thus excludes seafood and imports, said the entire 1971 increase came because of higher charges by processors and retailers. Farm returns for foods in the "market basket" did not rise at all in 1971 and, as a result, the farmer's share of the consumer food dollar declined for the second consecutive year.

Department analysts who prepared the report for a House subcommittee said consumers spent about $105 billion on farm-produced foods last year. About two-thirds of the money, $71 billion, went to pay processing, transporting and retailing costs and profits.

The marketing bill was up 4 per cent from 1970, the report said, largely because of higher wages to food industry workers.

that some of the 1,200 men of the North Vietnamese Army's 304th Division had crossed from the west to the east side of the road.

The east side of the road was previously held by the South Vietnamese.

Meanwhile, a battalion of South Vietnamese Marines was landed by helicopter six miles northeast of Quang Tri in the most northernly push of the 25-day-old government counter-offensive.

Within an hour-and-a-half the Marines were in battle, killing eight North Vietnamese, capturing one tank and knocking out another. Three Marines were wounded in the fighting a half mile from the landing zone.

Some 1,200 North Vietnamese pushed around a South Vietnamese airborne division and skirted government rangers to reach Highway 1. They moved into position Tuesday and a regiment of South Vietnamese infantrymen has failed to dislodge the Communists. Despite air strikes, artillery barrages and tank fire, the Communist clung to a line of bunkers within 100 yards of the highway.

Military spokesmen said South Vietnamese infantrymen killed 17 North Vietnamese at the site Friday when the Communists carrried out another blockade of the roadway.

South Vietnamese paratroopers fought a Communist force 200 yards south of Quang Tri Friday night, killing 34 and capturing a 75 mm recoilless rifle. Two paratroopers were killed and eight wounded. South Vietnamese artillery blew up a Communist tank a half mile southeast of the Quang Tri suburb of Trieu Phong. Communist gunners late Friday lobbed 300 rounds of artillery shells and mortar rounds into a South Vietnamese unit near Fire Base Birmingham, seven miles south of Hue and a company of North Vietnamese infantry attacked. The attack was repulsed, leaving at least one South Vietnamese wounded. North Vietnamese casualties were unknown.

A U.S. command spokesman said ll waves of B52 bombers pounded suspected North Vietnamese troop concentrations and staging areas inside Quang Tri province Friday night and today.

Special Meeting On Subdivision

A special meeting of the Larkspur City Council will be held Monday at 8 p.m. at city hall to consider approval of the final map of Meadowwood Subdivision No. 3.

At last week's council meeting no decision was reached on whether approval of a tentative map of the 20-lot subdivision by the planning commission had given automatic approval for grading.

Opponents of the final map have suggested that some hill top trees should be saved and grading should be less drastic.

ULSTER

the reintroduction of internment, last declared in the province nearly a year ago. The internment of IRA suspects had been one of the main reasons for Catholic resentment in the embattled province. Whitelaw began releasing some of those interned when he was appointed to govern the province last winter.

"It is not something I contemplate with any pleasure, but at the same time I have to face the fact that my first absolute duty is to safeguard law and order and members of the law abiding community," the secretary said.

The Belfast's loyalist (Protestant) morning newspaper, the Newsletter, said today martial law should not be ruled out.

The militant Protestant Ulster Vanguard movement Friday night called for Whitelaw and Prime Minister Edward Heath to resign and said if British troops did not move against terrorists, then Protestants would do so themselves."

"The time for talking is over," a Vanguard statement said.

Friday's 22 explosions in 81 minutes left much of the downtown area of Belfest a maze of broken glass and rubble. Targets included two bus stations, a railway station, gas works and a pub, all crowded with early weekend travelers or shoppers.

"This has been Ulster's worst day of carnage," said a police spokesman. "Other days have claimed more dead, but none has done more damage or spilled more blood."

Innocent Plea To Embezzling

A licensed auto salesman who allegedly offered to buy a customer a cut-rate Lincoln Continental has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to grand theft and embezzlement charges.

A preliminary hearing for Hollis Browne, 34, of no known address, was scheduled for Aug. 1.

Browne was arrested on a warrant last Friday. The warrant was issued after Robert J. Huerth of San Rafael told the district attorney's office he gave Browne, then employed by Lyons-Ryan Ford of San Rafael, $500 between November and January toward purchase of the car.

According to Huerth's affidavit, Browne left the auto dealership, but never supplied the car.

Recount Sought In School Vote

A housewife who failed to win a seat on the Sausalito School District board by only two votes yesterday filed a formal request for a recount of Tuesday's election results.

Judith Silver of Sausalito was defeated by Jesse E. Berry of Marin City. Berry received 698 votes to Mrs. Silver's 696.

She said following the election that she would ask the recount, and yesterday filed complete papers with the county elections office.

Elections Officer Peter Meyer said no date scheduled yet for the recount.

Another seat on the board went to attorney Douglas B. Martin, who defeated housewife Arlene Knudsen, 760 to 672.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORIAM
SOLDAVINI, DINA M. — In Loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother who entered into eternal life seven years ago today.
Gone, dear mother, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face;
But you left us to remember,
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still.
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.

Ravi Shankar To Be Party Guest

By MOLLY MARIN

Indian musician Ravi Shankar will be guest of honor at a party tonight at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Alan Jarach in San Rafael to benefit the Ali Akbar College of Music in San Rafael.

Entertainment will include a Kathak dance performance by Chitresh Das. Shankar, called the master of the Indian sitar, will not promise to perform, according to Audrey Jarach.

"He only performs when the vibes are right," she explained.

Shankar, who performed at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building last month, organized the Concert for Bangladesh with former Beatle, George Harrison, which was presented last year in Madison Square Garden. The concert resulted in a record album and movie, both entitled "Concert for Bangladesh," which have raised a great deal of money for the refugees of Bangladesh.

Planning to attend the party are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Swadesh, Chris Remick, Mrs. Adrian Sloss, Mrs. Dewey Donnell, Mel Wax and a representative of the Indian consulate.

AUSTIN WILLIAM LEA II married Susan Lynette Nordstrom on July 1 in Concord. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Austin W. Lea of Kentfield.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Nordstrom of Concord.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii the couple will live in Pleasant Hill.

FRIENDS WHO are leaving for a Caribbean cruise will be honored at a luncheon Tuesday by Mrs. Esther McClelland at her San Rafael home. The travelers are Miss Anita Mino, Mrs. Rose Solari, and Mrs. Joseph Sullivan, who are leaving Friday for Miami, where they will board the Nordic Prince for an extended cruise through the Caribbean.

Mrs. Solari's son, Arthur Solari of San Rafael, will accompany the voyagers. Other guests at the luncheon will be Mmes. George Hall and Jessie Leavell.

A CLASS reunion, Olympic try-outs and a ferry boat ride were all on the itinerary of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Crabtree and their daughters, Cindy and Jenni, who returned from vacation to their home in Novato this week.

Howard and Carolyn attended the 30th anniversary reunion of Howard's graduating class of Grand View High School in Washington, which was a two-day event. On their way north, the Crabtrees stopped in Eugene, Ore., to see the men's track tryouts for the Olympics. Cindy, who is in gymnastics at Novato High School, hopes to enter the Olympic tryouts in 1976.

The family also visited relatives in Chelan, Wash., and then went on to Seattle, Vancouver, B.C., and went by ferry to Victoria Island, returning to Novato by way of Highway 5, stopping in Oregon to see Salem, the state capitol.

THE ROGER W. Wellmans will be hosts tomorrow evening at their home in Mill Valley at a bon voyage African pot luck supper honoring Frank and Flossie Hewit of San Rafael.

The Hewits and their four teen-age children, John, Dean, Holly and Heather, will be leaving next week for a six weeks' do-it-yourself safari in Africa. It is the latest of the tours they plan for themselves every two years.

Among the places they will visit and take pictures are Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda, where they plan both to camp and stay in hotels. Friends from San Francisco will be vacationing in their home while they are gone.

Among the 60 guests invited are the South African vice consul Nortje of Tiburon, California State Senator and Mrs. Alan Short of Stockton, Ernest Delaossa and Murray Freedmans of San Francisco and Frank Jarboes of Mill Valley.

MR. AND MRS. Arthur G. Lindauer of the Marin Country Club Estates and two of their grandchildren, Sydney Pritchard and Eric Lindauer, both 11 years old, returned last week from a trip to Oregon.

They took the Rogue River jet trip to Agness, rode the dune buggies over the San Hills at Florence and then went on to the Oregon Caves. The youngsters and Mr. Lindauer went back for a second trip on the dune buggies, but Mrs. Lindauer said one trip was enough for her as at times the dune buggies went 70 miles per hour down the hills.

Bohan: Couture Is Not Dead; Paris To Show Next Week

By ALISON LERRICK

PARIS (AP) — "Would you wear costume jewelry if you can go to Harry Winston?"

Marc Bohan, designer for the Dior House of Fashion, asks the rhetorical question, dropping the name of the man who sells diamonds.

The question is really an answer — to all those nasty rumors that high fashion is disappearing.

Next week the Paris houses show their fall collections. All the couturiers reason that it's still better to wear beautiful clothes that fit than funny ones that don't.

"Why shouldn't a rich woman spend her money?" demands Pierre Cardin. "Putting it in the bank is dishonest.

"The couture isn't dead. It just looks different. If there were only popular things in life, it would be total ennui. A beautiful car is as good as a sculpture from a moral point of view."

Who is the couture client? She may have more money, but she's "a woman like any other," say the designers. In her 30s, pretty, with children, she doesn't go out of her way to damage her husband's career.

"If your wife shows up at a business dinner with 1945 curls and perched on high heels with her derriere sticking out behind, you won't do much business," says Hubert de Givenchy.

"There will always be rich and poor," he admits. His priz clients snatch up 100 dresses at a time for their various residences.

"If clothes don't make the woman, at least they make her happy. Personally I feel happier in a well-cut suit than if my pants are tight and I can't move my shoulders."

The French woman is no longer the best dressed of them all, the couturiers agree. Thanks to the airplane, she is now merely the hardest to satisfy.

"After all," says Cardin, "one goes to Cannes to see films. One goes to Paris for dresses."

LIKE TIGHTROPE WALKING

Career For Both Spouses Causes Many Difficulties

By JULIA MALONE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON, Mass. — Husbands and wives who try to keep two careers and a household together can succeed. But they're often like tightrope walkers juggling on the high wire.

Moving along in their professional fields, they still face the challenges of home — from the dandelions on the lawn and dirty dishes in the kitchen to child rearing.

Surveying the problems, sociologist Lynda Holmstrom concluded, "The surprising thing is that any two-career families exist at all."

Some do manage to exist, however, and Dr. Holstrom has made a study, recently printed in book form by Schenkman, of 20 such households. All the wives in the group held Ph.D. degrees, and all successfully kept their careers afloat.

THE STUDY FOUND:

—Wives in the group had been unsure about marriage before marrying. They often had long courtships "because of apprehension of how two careers would mesh." Marriage was, moreover, not "top priority" to these women.

—All of the women felt they had their spouses' support in their careers. As one wife put it, "You have got to have a husband, not who tolerates this, but who actively wants you to work."

—The husbands, on the other hand, had given little thought about whether to marry a homemaker or a woman with a career.

—Childbearing was often arranged to fit in with careers. One couple planned a child right after the mother finished her thesis.

—Fathers in the group helped out "considerably" with the child rearing.

—Even while these couples seemed cast far from the traditional homemaker-provider molds, there was no feminist utopia of absolute equality of sexes.

"On the occupational side, even though both careers were important, typically the man's still was more important," wrote Dr. Holmstrom.

IN AN INTERVIEW at Boston College, where she now teaches sociology, Dr. Holmstrom begins her advice to women who want a career as well as a husband with: "Be careful whom you marry."

For the two-career family, she said, traditional responses offer little help for problems such as "Who will vacuum?" "Who will stay home with the baby?" and "Where will we live?" From the minutia of everyday life to core feelings between husband and wife, such couples must find their own answers. And this can mean extra work for husband as well as wife.

To cope with the specter of undone jobs inside the house while husband and wife work on the outside, possible solutions include: The wife continuing to carry most of the burdens of the household; the prospect of leaving cooking, cleaning and shopping to the husband; some sort of team action; or — and this one was tried by some of the couples — neglect.

Of the first choice, Dr. Holmstrom wrote, "If women accept demanding outside employment and yet still retain most domestic duties, then this can hardly be considered an emancipation of the woman."

Among Dr. Holmstrom's group of couples, husbands often took over some of the household work. As one husband reported: "There is no other feasible way of running our menage without a 24-hour-a-day household staff. . ."

Nearly all of the 20 couples hired some domestic help — usually for ironing, vacuuming, and cleaning.

TASKS THAT husbands and wives were "most likely" to share, Dr. Holmstrom found, included washing dishes and cooking breakfast. Wives most often cooked the dinner and shopped for groceries. Husbands were most likely to take over the garbage-emptying detail, as well as repair jobs and any heavy work.

In a study made by the Cornell University department of consumer economics and public policy, however, the outlook for help from the more typical husband looks bleak. In 1,296 families in the Syracuse, N.Y., area in 1967-68, the survey found that husbands spent about the same amount of time on household duties regardless of how many hours the wife worked outside the home.

The last course of action — rather, nonaction — was chosen by some less fastidious housekeepers. As one of Dr. Holmstrom's respondents asserted, "It doesn't bother me that everything isn't shipshape."

Dr. Holmstrom found that nearly all of the couples wanted children and that 15 of them had at least one child. Those with children, however, usually waited a number of years after marriage before starting their families.

Often mothers, already established in their professional field, took time off to be full-time mothers while their children were infants. Later they returned to work.

Fathers often pitched in with the babysitting, diaper-changing and special outings for the kids. One husband spent a good deal of time at home with a new son while he wrote his thesis so that his wife could finish her course work for a degree.

Employers, she wrote in her study, should grow more flexible in their work schedules to allow parents to mix family rearing and their jobs. Fathers should take a bigger role in child care. And more day-care centers are needed.

'Follower Of 10 Commandments' Draws Some Negative Reaction

DEAR READERS:

Which early summer correspondent drew most response? "Follower of the Ten Commandments won by a country mile — and she got nothing but rocks. She was the one who called us "monsters" (among other good things) because we said "Parents are not always right just because they are parents."

Here are samplings:

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I don't often have time to write long letters, but I must make an exception. This is directed to Follower of the Ten Commandments who called herself a parent but, in my opinion, is not even a good excuse.

I am a Southern Baptist minister and I strongly object to her type of thinking. I work with young people, and parents like as her — rigid, demanding, condemning, intolerant and unlistening — are the cause of delinquency, drug abuse, homosexuality, rebellion and not (as she seems to think) the cures.

My mother raised five children without my father, who deserted us. We grew up talking about all sorts of problems, including sex —and I don't mean prying on her part. This helped me in dealing with the problems of others. It helped us all. We're a very close family.

As for planned parenthood, is FOTTC saying it is better for an unwanted child to be born and starve or be mistreated than not to be born at all? Birth control does not make a girl's standards high or low. Only love helps decide her moral values. If she can't get it at home, she searches elsewhere, sometimes in the wrong places.

"Me Boss — You Slave" doesn't bring love.

I think you have done a fantastic job with youth in truth, Helen and Sue. Keep up the good work. — REV. C.T.C., San Antonio

DEAR RAP:

"Togetherness, discipline, morals, loyalty, respect, " 'honor thy father and mother' " are some of the best ingredients for a good family, but Follower of the Ten Commandments "insists" on them, which means she ists" on them, which means she doesn't really have anything but discipline and that could break down fast. "Togetherness" comes from love (something she didn't mention). Respect and loyalty must be earned; morals are instilled. And who could really "honor" parents like her? — M and T

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

That weirdo who thinks she follows the Ten Commandments is more gone than any of the "criminals" (VD carriers, drug addicts, homosexuals) she mentions, because these people can be helped with tolerance and understanding (not by calling them criminals), while she thinks she's God, who has to judge people. She has a disease too: it's called bigotry.

"Talking things over" with your parents is the only way to go. Parents like her who think "talking" is "rebelling" would be murder to live with — especially if they expected to live with you when they got older (which they say is their right because you lived with them for 18 years). Yeacht! — AGE 12, SO SHE PROBABLY WON'T LISTEN (BUT MY PARENTS DO)

DEAR RAP:

This is for "Never Thought of it Before," whose fiance won't allow her to wear a sleeveless dress. You'd better think about it. Unless you are willing to give up all freedom and submt to ever-increasing rules and demands, you'd better not marry.

When I was married my husband decreed "no pants," so I wore house-dresses, thinking it was a small concession. Next he said "no work outside the home." Following that, "a good wife doesn't drive a car or gad around." Watch out or you'll become like me — A PRISONER IN HER OWN HOME

DEAR RAP:

Just why can't a boy tell a girl what he thinks she looks good in? If he doesn't want her to wear clothes that degrade him and make him feel insecure, that's his right. My girl friend wears what I like. — ONE MALE WHO DISAGREES

DEAR ONE:

Does she sit up and beg too? — RAP

SEW SIMPLE

For Better-Fitting Pleated Skirt

By EUNICE FARMER
Register and Tribune Syndicate

DEAR EUNICE,

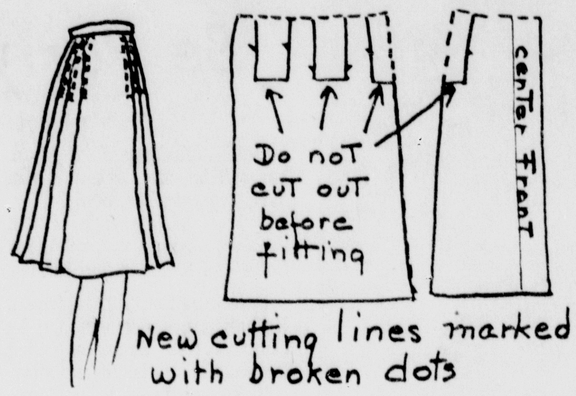

I am very disappointed with a pleated skirt I just finished. According to the measurements, I didn't need any alterations. The skirt has some stitched-down pleats in front and back. When I tried to put the skirt on, it was much too tight below the waist. My problem was that the material had been cut away from the pleats and there was no way I could ease them out to give myself more room. What should I have done?

MRS. C.J.R.

DEAR MRS. C.J.R.,

Perhaps your waist and hip measurements corresponded with the pattern, but you, as most women, are probably more rounded just below the waistline and the straight line of the skirt did not compensate for this.

My first advice is to add additional width to the seams if there is any doubt in your mind. Don't let it shatter your ego. If you don't need it, you can always cut it away. We all know that a slightly wider seam allowance permits the garment to hang better anyway.

Next, and perhaps most important, when your skirt pattern shows the excess fabric cut away from these stitched-down pleats, don't cut it away when you are cutting your garment. It is a simple matter to mark the stitching line for the pleats. After the pleats have been stitched and the skirt has been fitted, then you may cut away the excess fabric according to the original cutting guide. This gives you the safety margin if you should need a little extra room for ease.

DEAR EUNICE,

I purchased one of the new dolman sleeve patterns and no matter what I do, I can't fit it on my fabric without the addition of a seam, which I was trying to avoid. I don't think this type of pattern should be available if women are going to encounter such problems.

MRS. M.M.

DEAR M.M.,

One of the first and most important steps to prevent this is to check the fabric width that is suggested on the back of your pattern envelope. Your fabric is probably only 36 inches wide, which wouldn't be wide enough for the new dolman sleeves, unless you use a center front and center back seam.

Many times you can use a narrower fabric than the pattern suggests by getting additional fabric. The exception would be when the pattern has large sections cut on the bias, or some other unusual design or construction. Fabrics come in so many widths today that it would be impossible to find a pattern layout for each of these widths.

My fabric conversion chart is a great help in purchasing fabric in other widths. Simply send your request with a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Independent-Journal, and we will send you your fabric conversion chart.

MRS. SHIRLEY Greenlaw, Gardner, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"I have found that when it is necessary to gather a section of my garment, the gathering is more uniform if I sew one extra row below the seamline. Pull all three threads at once and distribute the cloth between the notches. Sew on the middle stitching, which is actually the seamline. With three rows it lays much flatter. After stitching in place, remove the thread on the row below the seamline. Of course, this can't apply to anything that makes permanent stitching marks, such as vinyl, velvet or satin."

DEAR EUNICE,

I just completed a dress, but after trying it on, found it necessary to relocate the darts. When I pressed out the original stitching, I found the color of my thread would not come out of the fabric. I thought thread was colorfast. How could I have avoided this?

FRUSTRATED AND DISCOURAGED

DEAR FRUSTRATED,

You haven't listened to my warnings. First, the thread you use must always be the same as the background color of your fabric. Another important tip is never press any darts or fitting seams until the garment has been fitted. Not only the thread, but also crease marks, may be impossible to remove.

Another innocent mistake could be using up your old threads for basting thread. This practice is all right, but don't use red, or other vibrant colors that may have an excess of dye which would come off on light-colored fabrics.

Real Expert In Hauling In Big Ones

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jerry Miller, champion deep sea fisherwoman, can tell about the one that got away.

"I had this marlin on the line three hours and 45 minutes," she said. "Our crew estimated it at about 900 pounds. It would have been a record catch."

Mrs. Miller, who weighs a mere 112 pounds and stands five feet three, said part of the problem was the rough, stormy sea the crew was in off the Virgin Islands.

"I had him right beside the boat 10 times," she recalled. "Two of the mates tried to get a gaff (huge hook) into him but the fish just sank. He was tired. But I know he revived later."

MRS. MILLER was in a 39-foot boat using a 50-pound line (a line which according to the rules will break at 50 pounds dead, not mobile, weight).

The Atlantic record now stands at 845 pounds for a blue marlin caught on an 80-pound line, she said. So far, her record marlin catch is a blue weighing 459 pounds caught on a 50-pound line, and in the same waters.

But her husband, Frank, an attorney and a golfer whom she taught deep sea fishing, can brag about the one that did not get away. He set an Atlantic record by catching a 448-pound marlin on a 12-pound line.

Rules of the sport are set by the International Game Fishing Association, headquartered at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Mrs. Miller uaid line weights run 6, 12, 20, 30, 50, 80, and 130 pounds.

THE ASSOCIATION decides on establishment of records. Absolutely no help is permitted the angler in getting the fish to the boat and no one may touch the angler's rod or reel.

Mrs. Miller said "If a shark gets one little nip out of the fish, you're also disqualified. It is ruled not a fair fight. You're also disqualified if the fish gets caught in the boat's propellors."

Mrs. Miller said her father started her fishing, surf-casting for pompano off the Miami coast. She kept up the sport as she grew up in Florida and in the coastal area around Maryland and Virginia.

Daughter Tracy, 8, also "is a fine little angler," she said.

Mrs. Miller's records include a world (at the time) mark set in 1967 for a cobia (52 and 3-4 pounds) on a 12-pound line and the largest white marlin (87 pounds) on a 12-pound line in the Caribbean.

NOW SHE'S turning her deep sea fishing skills into another career—a sports television series titled "Fishing Bums" in which she will be both hostess and participant. Jason Robards will appear as guest in some of the series.

CHAMPION DEEP sea fisherwoman Jerry Miller and actor Jason Robards will soon begin filming a sports television series, "Fishing Bums," in which Mrs. Miller will be both hostess and participant. (UPI Telephoto)

New Bed For Child Is A Good Investment

I-J Special Report

CHICAGO — Back-to-school time usually means new clothing and new shoes for youngsters but it should also mean a check of the child's bedding to make sure it's keeping up with his growth, according to sleep consultant Sally Ames of Chicago.

Many children sleep on hand-me-down mattresses that are well past their prime," she said.

"A child needs a good bed as much as an adult does," Miss Ames said. "In fact, since a child's body is still growing and needs correct support, a good bed can be even more important."

Many parents mistakenly believe that because a child is lighter than a grown-up, his mattress doesn't have to be as sturdy. Perhaps for that reason, 41 per cent of second-hand or hand-me-down mattresses are passed to youngsters under 12.

The trouble is that the hand-me-down mattress usually has sags or hollows in it and this can affect the child. In addition, since a child's bed takes a lot of extra punishment through jumping, pillow fights and what have you, a hand-me-down bed can deteriorate very quickly.

She recommends that the child be given a brand-new bed of his own as soon as he's old enough to be moved out of a crib. The mattress should be of quality vnstruction because it will probably last the child from his second through his 17th year, which is a money-saving proposition.

A good mattress will support the child's growing body properly and stand up to the many uses a child will give it, she said.

"As a guideline, a mattress at $69 (plus matching box spring at the same price) is a good starting point. This may sound like a lot of money, but it's a sound investment in your child's physical well-being," Ames concluded.

Old Indian Mound Is Discovered

Grading at the planned Madera Del Presidio housing development in Corte Madera has uncovered an Indian mound.

Archaeologists and anthropologists, hastily digging in the area before heavy equipment scrapes the site clean have unearthed animal bones, shells, tools and fire remains.

The ound's traces were discovered last week by schoolboys John and Willy Hart and Paul Farkas, when they found tools, bones of a deer and a steer head.

They told their parents, and the California State University, San Francisco, anthropology department was notified. The Treganza Museum at the University assigned graduate student Tom Jackson to make a hasty dig at the site.

Other local anthropologists and archaelogists have visited the site, and report that heavy equipment drivers have been cooperative in leaving the mound area untouched.

Treganza Museum officials say an old 1808 map shows four Indian "kitchen" mounds in the Madera Del Presidio development area.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Brustein' A Success By New Theater Group

By KAY KSANDA

It was opening night for a new theater group — the Fifth Street Actors Company — in San Rafael last night. Producers Charles Cherry and Gregory Norgaard both directed and starred in the sociological drama, "The Sign In Sidney Brustein's Window."

Written by Lorraine Hansberry (author of Raisin in the Sun) when she was on her deathbed, the play is a powerful drama that focues on vulnerabilities and interrelationships. It's quite an epitaph. And it's quite a project for this new company to take on as a first effort.

Written in 1964, the story focuses on characterization, and depends almost entirely on the actors to bring what they will from the disintegration of each personality. It can be a "happening" or a Greek tragedy. Last night it started off light, ended somewhere in the middle, and was well worth the effort.

The tale pivoted around Sidney, a philosopher who lives in Greenwich Village and who preaches platitudes and poetry but never becomes involved with reality. There is an Irish politician, a neo-communist Black, a suicidal prostitute, a homosexual playwright, Sidney's neurotic wife, and Mavis, his WASP sister-in-law. All of them went right down the drain when they leaned on the illusioned wisdom of Sidney, played convincingly by Norgaard.

Rising from the destruction came the least likely figure of all, Mavis, the embodiment of middle-class morality. Played with gathering power and drama, Barbara Jeppesen imprinted her character on the play with an inspiring and shattering performance. She was the touchstone of the story as she carried her deep wound with telling dignity.

Iris, Sidney's wife, played by Arden Sampson, was in and out of her personality, gaining her grip as her character became more polarized. Elaine Womach, as Gloria, the prostitute, was clearly convincing in her vulnerability. Bill Kimmons, as the homosexual David, was great on the acting, but needed help on costuming. Dale Kleine, last seen in the Marin production of "The Trial of the Catonsville 9," was miscast as the Negro, Alton. His makeup didn't make it.

There's nothing amateurish about this group, and the advent of the company's presence in San Rafael is warmly welcomed. Both Cherry and Norgaard are alumni of Sir Francis Drake High School and have had professional experience. They are well known for their work with the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts, Novato Theater, College of Marin, and Shakespeare Festival.

The play will be running every Friday and Saturday through Aug. 19, 8:30 p.m., at the Belrose Studio Theater, 1415 Fifth Avenue. It's good.

BALLET REVIEW

Another Season Begins Impressively

By MARIE RAMEAU

SAN FRANCISCO — During the past two years, each time I've seen the San Francisco Ballet present a fresh season, I have been left with an impression of unprecedented leaps-and-bounds progress. This was no less true of Thursday evening's performance, which opened the company's 1972 summer residency at California State University, San Francisco.

Unfortunately, I missed the first number on the program, Carlos Carvajal's "Matinee Dansante," for a quartet of dancers consisiting of Lynda Meyer, Philippe Arrona, Victoria Gyorfi and John McFall.

Having seen the premiere in the summer of 1970, I would call it an excellent choice for an opener, being a spirited semi-classical morsel full of delicious warmth, gaiety and technical fireworks.

Two sophisticated, more somber works followed, the first of which was John Pasqualetti's "The Flaming Angel," to Prokofieff's Third Symphony. This is perhaps the best, most substantial of Pasqualetti's works, although I wish I could say the same of the composer.

Pasqualetti truly approached a symphonic style in his choreography, which was enhanced by variegated unitard costumes and a spectrum of multicolored lighting, ranging from deep oranges and blues to hazy pastels.

Pasqualetti, already well-known for his staging of "Tommy" and his several ballets for other local companies, is not a choreographer to be taken lightly, as demonstrated in "Flaming Angel." Giving classical ballet vocabulary his original and unique modern flair, the result was elegant, dynamic and deep. He obviously is capable of great development.

"Statements," to Copland's "Statements for Orchestra," left me a little depressed — but maybe it was supposed to. Or, maybe this was because I generally dislike Copland. This ballet consisted of various choreographic themes, or "statements," which were eloquent in their simplicity and clarity, conveying different moods through dance motifs.

One was entitled "Cryptic," but the whole thing was cryptic enough for me. The piece was well-danced, with a particularly moving pas de deux, "Subjective," by Victoria Gyorfi and Geoffrey Thomas.

I missed two of the company's most outstanding young artists this time. Kerry Williams has moved on to New York, but Sara Maule is apparently busy preparing a new ballet to be premiered next week, in which she will be the featured attraction.

The San Francisco Ballet has grown immeasurably in theatricality, and this season really has it all together. The company continues to perform at the university through Aug. 27, in an exciting repertoire which includes 10 premieres.

Comedian Carlin Jailed: 'Profanity'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)— Comedian George Carlin was arrested immediately following his performance at the Milwaukee Summerfest here Friday night.

Carlin was charged with disorderly conduct for alleged profanity in his comedy routine and was released on $150 bond.

Peevey: 'EOC Is A Rip-Off'

Abolition of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, turning its programs over to existing agencies, was urged yesterday by supervisorial candidate Michael R. Peevey.

The council "is a rip-off," he said. "It is supposed to be a community action agency, yet it possesses neither action nor community."

In a letter to the board of supervisors, he outlined a five-point program which he said was aimed at "eliminating obvious bureaucratic duplication."

He called for placing the Head Start program under the county board of education, the supplemental food program under the county Department of Public Social Services, the food stamp program under the Marin Senior Coordinating Council, investigating "every phase" of the council's operation, and eliminating the council.

Peevey congratualted supervisors for withholding county funds from the council, but said "federal authorities must be pressured into also halting their funding."

The candidate, however, suggested the supervisors reconsider their decision to turn the council's food stamp program over to the post office, which he said was "already overburdened." Senior citizens seeking employment could do the job instead, he said.

The council, subject of several investigations by federal and county auditors for alleged mismanagement of funds and programs, should be subjected by the county to "a thorough, full-scale investigation of every phase of its operations," Peevey said.

"The mismanagement of funds intended for the needy is the most serious form of public malfeasance and should be dealt with accordingly," he said.

Alfred R. Conklin III, the council's new executive director, Peevey said, "is attempting to salvage a hopeless situation."

Music Festival Set By Baptists

Rick Carreno, a former motorcycle gang member who has appeared with evangelist Billy Graham on nationwide television, will join forces with flamenco guitarist Dennis Agajanian and the 80-voice "Way Singers" from the First Baptist Church, Modesto, in the second "Jesus Music Festival" in Marin County on Friday, July 28 at San Rafael High School Auditorium.

The inter-denominationally sponsored event to begin at 7:29 p.m. in the high school auditorium at 185 Mission Ave., San Rafael, is free to the public.

Carreno will tell of his past life on Sunset Strip in Hollywood, which he said "consisted of motorcycles, narcotics and breaking the law. I auked Jesus Christ to come into my life."

Dave Brecheen, who is coordinating the event, said Carreno was featured speaker at four "Meet Jesus" youth evangelism conferences in Baytown, Corpus Christi, Tyler and Lubbock, Texas, where youths numbering 9,000 and up gathered for mass rallies earlier this month.

Dennis Agajanian, who appeared recently with singer Pat Boone on national television will also speak and play the style of guitar music for which he is noted.

A major portion of the program will be given over to the music of the "Way Singers," under the direction of Charlie Ivans. The group will present a musical package of songs by Ralph Carmichael, Jimmy Owens, Andrae Crouch, featuring vocals, guitar, drums, and bass.

The talented youths are on a tour of Northern California and sang before crowds of more than 3,000 persons juring a "One Way" Christian outreach effort in Santa Barbara over Easter vacation, 1972.

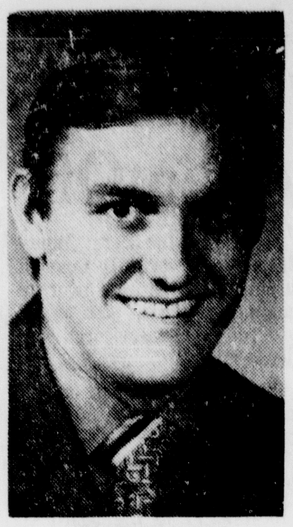

Carreno, in discussing his life style before "asking Jesus Christ to take over," said "When I did something I went all the way. One day I shot an overdose of heroin. Later I found myself crawling into a big metal trash can and lay there suffering in all that garbage for four days. I went through hell ... I began to realize how everything I thought was so groovy was backfiring in my face."

After Carreno recovered, he went to visit his mother, who convinced him to go to a Billy Graham Crusade in Anaheim, Calif. He attended the crusade and, as a result, "asked Jesus Christ into my life."

"Before, I experienced the temporary 'pure peace' that comes from a needle and ends in agony. Now I experience peace that never ends. Jesus is running my life," Carreno said.

RELIGIOUS EVENTS

Chinatown Missionary To Speak

Rev. David Lim, Assemblies of God missionary to Chinatown, San Francisco, will be the pulpit guest of Central Assembly of God in San Rafael on July 23. He will address the church at 6 p.m.

Lim has ministered in various parts of Asia, including Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia, East Pakistan, and India. Recently he was on a one year missionary assignment to Hong Kong, where he engaged in special language studies and worked with the First Assembly of God, Kowloon, Hong Kong.

Lim is an American born Chinese. He has recently been appointed to pastor a home missions effort to reach the Chinese in Chinatown, San Francisco. In June of 1965 he graduated from Bethany Bible College in Santa Cruz and has been involved with ministry to the Chinese since 1964.

In the church meeting he will report on the current missionary situation overseas as well as in America, especially as pertains to the spreading of the gospel among Orientals.

Church School

July 31 through August 4 are the dates for a special interfaith vacation church school in the San Geronimo Valley.

St. Cecelia's Roman Catholic Church and The San Geronimo Valley Presbyterian Church have cooperatively planned and staffed the week with Mrs. Steven Pinkney, directing.

Groups of young people, nursery (with previous school experience) through eighth grades will informally put their faith to work and study from 9 to 11:30 each day at the Presbyterian Church.

The cost per child is $1 with maximum fee of $2 per family. Every child is welcome.

Ice Cream Social

The annual public "Ice Cream Social with Music" will be held Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m. in the outdoor courtyard and patio of the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo.

Admission is free but a small fee will be charged those who want ice cream with "fixings" to make sundaes.

Scheduled for the musical part of the event will be a program of little known music of Duke Ellington performed by a small combo under the direction of Clive Hawthorne, Marin's musical barber. It will be chamber-jazz level music in varied instrumentation, not done by big bands.

Also on the program will be works played by Wilbur Russell and Thomas Best. The works are the Mozart Sonata in D major and Satie's "Three Pieces in Form of a Pear."

Bible School

Christian Church, 50 Ranchitos Road in San Rafael, will host a vacation Bible school for Bible lessons, crafts, games and contests.

The school for ages 3 through 12 will run from July 31 - Aug. 4 from 9:30-11:30 a.m.

Guest Performance

At the Sunday morning services of the Community Congregational Church Mrs. Nancy Loder will sing Vivaldi's "Motetto" as portion of the celebration of worship.

Mrs. Loder has her Masters degree in performance from Fresno State University and is presently studying at the San Francisco Conservatory. The service is at 10:00 a.m.

The sermon Sunday will be entitled "Human Lberation" and will be presented by the Rev. Frank Evans, minister of the church.

Mrs. Loder will sing a recital which includes the Vivaldi Sunday afternoon at Temple Methodist Church in San Francisco as a part of the summer concert series of the church. The recital is at 5:00 p.m.

President's Club

Mervin E. Mannie, FIC, 1560 Sonoma Avenue, Santa Rosa, district representative for Aid Association for Lutherans, was one of 135 members of the AAL field force whose sales and service efforts in 1971 qualified him for the President's Club.

Mannie was cited under a new AAL point system which measures service to members and quality production as well as sales efforts in both life and health insurance.

Eastern Orthodox Facing Change

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — To most westerners, the ways of eastern Christianity always have seemed somewhat strange and mystifying - its awesome liturgy, its icons, its elaborate vestments, its refusal to reduce theology to technical formulas, its deep sense of divine mystery.

But its qualities have sustained it through harshly trying circumstances, both now and in the past, under hostile regimes, as in modern Russia, and amid the shifting powers of the Middle East.

Now, under another strained situation, the church has taken on generally unknown leadership.

He is the new Archibishop of Constantinople (modern Istanbul), the eastern counterpart of the Pope of Rome, the preeminent spiritual guide of the world's 250 million Eastern Orthodox believers, Patriarch Dimitrios I.

His elevation this week was surrounded by difficulties and question marks that involved restrictions imposed by the Turkish government and left uncertainties about the church's future course and the status of its historic principal see.

Will it gradually be forced to move elsewhere? Will it do so by its own choice to preserve its rights? Might the new Patriarch voluntarily go into exile in defense of the church's prerogatives?

"No one really knows what may happen," said the Rev. George Bacopoulos, chancellor of the Greek Orthodox Church in the Americas. "We'll just have to wait and see whether the Turkish government takes further steps to demean the Patriarchate."

Pressures on it by the government of the predominantly Moslem country were obvious in the election of the new Patriarch, successor to the internationally esteemed and ecumenically influential Athenagoras I, who died a week ago.

Among American churchmen who attended the funeral, their ranks thinned by Turkish restrictions, sources said the government there had barred the five most likely candidates from election to the office, and also ordered it filled hastily, within three days.

"This was unprecedented to force an election in 72 hours," Father Bacopoulos said. Historically, it has taken at least a month to allow time for deliberation and global consultations among leaders of the various Eastern Orthodox branches.

But under the circumstances, the Holy Synod of the Patriarchate apparently had no choice, other than outright defiance, except to comply. So it acted immediately to elect a new primate of the church from the limited roster allowed, resulting in the surprise choice of Dimitrios.

"He is unknown to most of us, but we understand he is a very pious and good man," said Father Bacopoulos, a keenly versed and experienced hand in the church's worldwide affairs.

In the new Patriarch's installation address, he said he hoped to continue in the footsteps of Athenagoras, the warm, expansive churchman who had led Estern Orthodoxy out of centuries of isolation and into increasing alliance with Roman Catholicism and Protestantism.

But what obstacles the new Patriarch may face - or what particular qualities he possesses for leading and inspiring the vast, loosely linked branches of Eastern Orthodoxy - remained clouded both by the circumstances and his own previous relative obscurity.

He himself had been shocked by his election, according to Bishop Silas, of America's Greek Orthodox Church, who attended the funeral. He said Dimitrios previously had no inkling he was being considered.

Bishop Silas is auxiliary to Archbishop Iakovos, head of the Greek Orthodox Church in America, who had been considered in world inter-church circles as the foremost prospect to succeed Athenagoras.

But Iakovos, who has served as Athenagoras' chief representative in the pioneering diplomacy which opened contacts with other churches, was barred by the Turkish government even from attending the funeral.

Nevertheless, despite the difficulties and uncertainties Eastern Orthodoxy now has a new Patriarch. Although he is generally unknown, this also was the case when Pope John XXIII was named Pope of Rome, and his reign - along with that of Athenagoras - bridged chasms in Christianity.

Houston Parish Named 'Church Of The Year'

NEW YORK, N.Y. — A church that has developed a trail-blazing system of Christian communes — what it calls "households" — has been recognized by Guideposts magazine as the church of the year for 1972.

The congregation of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer in Houston, Tex., was presented with a bronze plaque in a special ceremony attended by Guideposts editors from New York who hailed the church for its strong, innovative, practical example for churches everywhere.

The 600-member Texas church has drawn national and international attention for a host of achievements, foremost among them its welding together of culturally diverse people, most of them young, who live "in community."

The core of this unusual congregation, about 300 people, consider themselves as servants of the Lord. Their lives are centered in the church and its ministries. They reside in their households — 43 of them — of different types and varying sizes, some for students, some for families. All of them are self-supporting and disciplined.

While this core lives in community, it is not isolated from the world. The children of the parish go to public schools; the adults have jobs of different types throughout the Houston area. And some of the church's ministries send men and women to distant cities and even other lands, as in the case of the medical ministry in Mexico.

The key to understanding the householders — and of the 300 other church members representing varying degrees of church participation — is that the Holy Spirit is infused into every area of their lives. They believe that the gifts of the Spirit are meant to be part of everyday life.

The congregation slipped into community living naturally, almost without knowing it. In the same manner, and in a very short period of time, they began creating their ministries, programs to help people in and out of their church, until today there is a long list of vigorous projects, some of vast scope.

There's a coffee house for young people; a shop in which there are free clothes, washed and ironed, ready for the needy; a ranch for boys with home problems and in trouble with drugs; a jail ministry; a counseling program; a free medical clinic; an office for free legal advice; a bookstore; a literacy program, especially to teach Mexican-Americans to read English; a traveling ministry, conducted principally by the ever-on-the-go rector, the Rev. Mr. Graham Pulkingham.

The Church of the Redeemer's outreach is strong and growing. But it is essential to realize that while these committed parishioners want their church to be a center of renewal for different kinds of Christians from every denomination, they hold firmly to the idea of a strong parish church.

Every member of the congregation feels responsible to the Lord for his own individual life of faith, but all congregants will tell you that the Christian life was meant to be a corporate experience, that the Lord truly uses individuals, but He uses them best when they are bound together in faithful and loving harmony.

Conservation Jewish Arm Backs Abortion

I-J Special Report

NEW YORK — The conservative movement in American Judaism supports the liberalized abortion law now in effect in New York State as completely within Jewish religious law.

This was made known here in a joint statement by leaders of the three elements of the conservative movement: Jacob Stein, president, and Rabbi Bernard Segal, executive vice-president of the United Synagogue of America, Rabbi Judah Nadich, president, and Rabbi Wolfe Kelman, executive vice chairman, of the Rabbinical Assembly, and Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel, Professor of Ethics at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America.

The statement was issued to clarify an article in a New York newspaper which, after citing an Orthodox organization's objections to the abortion law and calling for its repeal, reported erroneously that conservative Judaism had taken no stand on the question.

"Conservative Judaism has indeed taken a stand, based on the same Jewish legal sources and factors upon which rabbis of all generations have drawn, as presented by Rabbi David Feldman in his authoritative volume 'Birth Control in Jewish Law,' " The statement declared.

"In testimony before the New York State Legislature, Dr. Morris Fond, obstetrician and gynecologist of Roslyn, L.I., and the United Synagogue and Rabbinical Assembly, asserted that abortions, although serious even in the early stages of conception, are not to be equated with murder, hardly more than is the decision not to become pregnant."

While abortions "involve very serious psychological, religious and moral problems," the statement said, "the welfare of the mother must always be our primary concern." And while the New York law is supported "for its removal of inequities and abuses," the conservative organizations "hope that every woman considering abortion will be guided by moral considerations and never lose sight of the gravity of her decision."

First To Serve

DETROIT (UPI) —Father Gabriel Richard, who helped organize the University of Michigan in 1817, was the first Catholic priest to serve in Congress and was the founder in 1804 of a women's academy to train teachers, which was the earliest effort at teacher training in the Northwest Territory.

Artsy-Craftsy Plan For New Testament

An original "artsy-craftsy" approach to the New Testament will be offered at The Church of All Faiths on Paradise Drive, Corte Madera, July 31 through Aug. 11. "The New Testament in 27 Flavors" has been designed by Faye Griffin, a student at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, and will be directed by her.

The program, in the form of a course, includes a brief survey of the 27 books of the New Testament, with games geared to each book, and religious art utilizing fabrics and assorted materials, and exposure to a variety of Christian hymns and songs through recordings.

The classes are limited to specific age groups, students in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades only.

Ecumenical Council Picks New Executive Director

Rev. Lynn E. Hodges, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Tacoma, Wash., has been elected executive director of the Northern California Ecumenical Council, successor to the Northern California Council of Churches. He will assume office Oct. 1, 1972.

Hodges holds a B.A. in political science and speech from Ottawa University, M.A. in philosophy of education from Kansas University and an M.A. in theology from the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School. He also has taken special studies in counseling, group dynamics, administration and management, urban problems, transactional analysis, racism and radio-television.

He succeeds Dr. Clifford Crummey who, after five years as executive director, has become the pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, an ecumenical group known as the Sather Gate Churches, bordering on the University of California campus.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kratz, past president of the Christian Church-Disciples of Northern California-Nevada, was elected acting director for the interim period.

Mrs. Kratz has been active in ecumenical work in California, including a term as chairman of the California Migrant Ministry.

Spiritual Life Council Slated

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — The Assemblies of God Council on spiritual Life will be held in Minneapolis Aug. 14-16. Thirtysyeven pastors, educators, laymen and district and national church leaders have been named to speak during the meeting.

Thomas F. Zimmerman, General Superintendent of the denomination, said a major objective of the Council will be "to consider what the Scriptures have to say on the very vital subject of spiritual maturity, that will make us more effective in the task of reaching our generation for Christ."

Tabernacle Choir

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The famed Mormon Tabernacle Choir, which has 375 members, was founded during the pioneer days when Brigham Young was leader of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Couples Can Write Own Vow

NEW YORK (UPI) —Marrying couples may write their own wedding vows under the new marriage service developed by the Inter-Lutheran commission on Worship.

Otherwise, they may use a promise which pledges them to "share all that is to come, to give and to receive, to speak and to listen, to inspire and to respond, and in all circumstances of our life together to be loyal with my whole life and with all my being."

Bible Translation

NEW YORK (UPI) —The American Bible Society says at least one book of the Bible has been translated into 1,431 languages and the entire Bible into 249. The New Testament has been translated into 329 languages.

Over 14,000 Attend Witnesses Convention

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — A four-day district convention of Jehovah's Witnesses has ended Sunday at the Coliseum Arena in Oakland with 14,503 persons in attendance.

Delegates converged on the city from the Greater Bay Area for the district religious meeting, one of 59 scheduled throughout the United States this summer.

Patrick Smythe, convention chairman, delivered the opening address. He spoke on the subject, "Living No Longer for Ourselves."

The keynote address was delivered by William Jackson from the world headquarters of the Watchtower Society in Brooklyn, N.Y. His theme was, "Divine Rulership — Are We for It or Against It?"

Condemning Christendom for affiliation with a world organization comprised of many communistic governments, Jackson said that Christendom has belied her name. "There is no excuse for it," he stated.

"The all-important issue today is, not Communism or capitalistic democracy—hich shall rule? These are both merely forms of human rulership. Rather, it is: human rulership by men who are imperfect, sinful, dying and out of harmony with Jehovah God, or divine rulership by the Messianic kingdom of the resurrected Jesus, the Lamb of God, who died sacrificially for all mankind.

"The most important, most serious matter today is to be, not against, but for divine rulership. Otherwise, people face destruction as enemies of God in the tribulation with which this world ends." Jackson concluded by saying, "We are for divine rulership both now and forevermore."

Methodists Name Choy As Bishop

SEATTLE (UPI) — The first Asian-American to become a bishop of the Ucited Methodist Church within the United States was elected here recently.

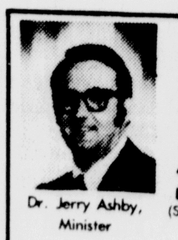

He is the Rev. Wilbur W.Y. Choy, 54, Berkeley, Calif., a Chinese-American.

Dr. Choy is believed to be the first of the denomination's U.S. bishops who is neither Caucasian nor black. The church now has seven black bishops in this country, all serving predominately white regions.

The new bishop was the third elected to the position by the western jurisdictional conference meeting in Seattle. The others are the Rev. Jack M. Luell of Vancouver, Wash., and the Rev. Melvin E. Wheatley of Los Angeles.

Dr. Choy was elected on the 27th ballot taken over a three-day period, following the withdrawal of their candidacies by the Rev. Harvey Potthoff, Denver, and the Rev. Richard Cain, of Phoneix, Ariz.

IF YOU ARE A HIGH CALIBER PERSON
WE'D LIKE TO MEET
YOU PERSONALLY

We provide a high weekly drawing account, an excellent commission structure, and extend the fringe benefits of hospitalization and life insurance, profit sharing, and stock benefits for your family's protection.

We are presently engaged in seeking the successful individual who would enjoy working in the Industrial/Institutional atmosphere and be able to take advantage of our growth situation to further his own. There is also an excellent opportunity for sales management for those who so desire. No sales or technical background necessary for the right person.

We are a division of a New York Stock Exchange listed corporation whose sales volume has grown over 700% in the last ten years (with black and white figures in our Annual Report to prove it). Our salesmen — who have made this ALL possible — have grown financially and personally in the same remarkable way. Their average income after one year in our business is excellent and grows substantially by the second, and third years.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Chronic, Stable Angina Pectoris — A Form Of Heart Disease

D. D. writes: "For two years I have had heart trouble with angina pectoris (my doctor confirmed the diagnosis). Chest pain develops only when I walk too fast, against the wind, or up a hill. But the condition remains the same — no better, no worse. Please understand, I'm not asking for trouble, but what can a man of 67 expect with this hanging over his head?"

At the present time, our reader has chronic, stable angina pectoris, a form of coronary heart disease. In fact, he is fortunate because it has not changed and occurs with a fixed frequency under the same conditions. Stable or stereotyped angina carries the best outlook among victims of coronary heartdisease. Although no one can predict the outcome, vany patients of mine have, under these circumstances, continued unchanged for years. Some have done so for decades.

THIS MAN should avoid the activities and situations known to bring on distress. He should take a nitroglycerin tablet ahead of time if the situation that usually causes pain cannot be avoided. If distress develops despite this precaution, this man ought to immediately stop whatever he is doing and rest. No harm will come from taking another nitroglycerin tablet, but never proceed with the activity until the pain is gone.

Our reader should consult his physician if the angina becomes more frequent or prolonged, develops for no apparent or new reasons or occurs at night and does not respond to the nitroglycerin. Changes in this kind may be the signal that a more serious form of coronary heart disease has developed. Mr. D. D. also wants to know what to expect — first, he may develop a heart attack (acute myocardial infraction). On the other han, he may die suddenly.

NOW AND THEN the increasing irritability of the heart stems from other disorders such as a hemorrhage, fever, severe emotional strain, or increased thyroid activity. When these factors are controlled, the condition will again stabilize.

(Questions on medical topics will be anwwered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

CHOLESTEROL

D. W. writes: Does the cholesterol level go down when most of the thyroid gland is removed?

REPLY

No. It usually goes up. The cholesterol level in the blood is influenced by the glands of the body. It is low when the thyroid is overactive and high when the gland is sluggish. It is likely to be high when the thyroid is removed.

Services District Director Assailed

A director of the Marin City Community Services District, accused of living outside the district, said yesterday he spends a lot of time and receives mail at a Mill Valley address, but votes and pays rent in Marin City.

Director Michael Washington was criticized at a services district board meeting Thursday night by Juanita Cobb, a community worker and former board member.

Washington acknowledged staying at 180 Miller Avenue in Mill Valley with a friend, but said: "I don't live or sleep here. I'm registered to vote and pay rent in Marin City."

Washington lists his Marin City address as 22 Burgess Court.

A committee, composed of Mrs. Cobb, services district executive director Daniel Winters and board members Frank J. Phillips and Ollie Griffith, was named to look into the matter and report back Aug. 17.

Washington was elected to a four-year term in 1970.

The board also ratified a decision, previously made in closed session, to retain the services of Winters as executive director.

The board also discussed a proposal to reorganize the district's recreation program and move its playground equipment from St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church to the Manzanita Center in an effort to save money.

Boat Owners Asked To Help In Deputy Search

Boat owners were asked to join in an intensive search today and tomorrow for the body of Marin Deputy Sheriff Gerald Tanner, victim of a boating accident on Tomales Bay last Saturday.

Sheriff's Lt. William Johansen said today the search was to start at 8 a.m. Command headquarters will be set up at the Marconi Cove Marina in Marshall near Synanon, he said.

In addition to sheriff's officers, members of the Sheriff's Marine and Air Patrols, Johansen is seeking volunteers who have boats to join in the search. He said privately owned helicopters also will be used.

Tanner was presumed drowned in the accident in which his 12-foot boat capsized. His wife, two children and his wife's parents were saved.

Mays Rises To Occasion In Return At Candlestick

By JOE SARGIS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The years come and go but Willie Mays remains as constant as time.

Put a game on the line, throw in a howling crowd and Mays is certain to rise to the occasion.

So it came as no surprise, really, when Willie, the now 41-year-old superstar, got the game winning hit Friday night as the New York Mets edged the San Francisco Giants, 3-1.

It was a little early —the fifth inning to be exact —for the game to be hanging in the balance, but with starting pitchers Jerry Koosman of the Mets and Jim Barr of the Giants working on shutouts, it was the sort of situation where one blow might decide it.

Mays, who was given standing ovations in his initial two at-bats as a Met in his old home park, came to bat in the fifth with a run in, two out and Jerry Grote on third.

Barr threw Willie a low fastball over the heart of the plate for his first offering and, when last seen, the ball had cleared the centerfield fence at Candlestick Park with room to spare for two more runs and the old ball game.

Koosman, with help from ace fireman Tug McGraw over the final 1 2-3 innings, made the blow stand up as the game winner and picked up his seventh victory in 12 decisions. McGraw, who worked out of a tough situation in the eighth, gained credit for his 15th save, a team record.

"Sure, it felt good," Mays said of his homer, "but not as good as the first time."

The "first time" was back on May 14 in New York when in his first game for the Mets after being traded over from the Giants, Willie hit a game winning homer —also in the fifth inning.

Friday night's homer was Mays' fourth of the year —all for the Mets —and the 650th of his career. Willie started in the game only because the Mets are hurting for outfielders. He'll take off today when Jon Matlack pitches for the Mets against the Giants' Frank Reberger of Novato, and then come back Sunday when Tom Seaver goes against Ron Bryant.

Yogi Berra, the Mets skipper, said Mays came to him before Friday night's game and asked to play.

"Any time he wants to play, he'll play," said an appreciative Berra. "We talked it over and I said 'okay' just like that."

The turnout at Candlestick was 18,117, small by Mets' standards, but pretty good for the Giants, who now have attracted only 433,158 in 43 dates. The Mets, by contrast, have drawn more than 1,200,000 at home in 40 dates.

Koosman had the Giants on the hip with a four-hitter, including Chris Speier's 11th homer, when they loaded the bases on him with one out in the eighth on two infield hits sandwiched around a clean single by Speier.

McGraw came on at that point and quickly snuffed out the rally. In fact, he needed only one pitch as Ken Henderson shot a hot smash through the box which Bud Harrelson scooped up behind second and converted into a doubleplay.

"We had our chances," said a glum Charlie Fox, the Giants manager, "but we couldn't break through. If Henderson's hit had been over a foot, we had two runs for a tie and the makings of a big inning."

Fox said there was nothing wrong with the pitch Mays hit for his homer.

"The kid (Barr) put it right where he was supposed to," said Fox. "Only Mays got

Fenway Park: A's Bad Spot

BOSTON (UPI) —Against Boston, the Oakland Athletics are about as lucky as a bunch of mice in a house of cats.

The Red Sox have been eating up the leaders of the American League West. Boston squeaked out a 5-4 decision in the 14th inning at Fenway Park Friday night for its sixth straight win over Oakland. It also was the 12th consecutive win at home for the Bosox.

To make things particularly ingratiating to A's manager Dick Williams, a former Red Sox pilot, the last three Red Sox victories over the A's were all by one-run margins.

For the A's Friday night, it was a case of too much at the wrong time. They loaded the bases with none out in the 10th inning but relief pitcher Don Newhauser came on to get Dave Duncan on a pop fly and pinchhitters Don Mincher and Adrian Garrett on called third strikes.

The Athletics filled the bases again in the 14th but failed to score as Newhauser struck out pinchhitter George Hendrick.

In the bottom of the 14th, Doug Griffin of Boston scored all the way from first base on Sal Bando's error with two out to give Boston the winning run. Griffin singled and Carl Yastrzemski hit a sharp grounder that skirted off Bando's glove into right centerfield, enabling Griffin to round the bases.

Angel Mangual capped a three-run Oakland first inning with a double that scored Joe Eudi and Bando. Mangual gave the A's a 4-0 lead in the third when he followed Reggie Jackson's triple with a single to center.

CONGRATULATIONS — New York Met center fielder Willie Mays (24) received a congratulatory handshake from teammate Jerry Grote (15) after belting a two-run home run last night in his first game at Candlestick Park as a visiting player. San Francisco Giant catcher Doug Rader (14) and Met first baseman John Milner looked on. The Mets won, 3-1.

Wells' Shot At Conqueror

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Nick Wells will get what he wants tonight — another shot at Duane Bobick.

The heavyweight boxer from Hamilton Air Force Base, fighting before his home-town crowd, yesterday scored a technical knockout in 1:54 of the first round against Larry Holmes of Trenton, N.J., to move into tonight's finals in the U.S. Olympic boxing trials.

Two other Hamilton fighters also brawled their way into the finals. Welterweight Jesse Valdez of Houston decisioned Sgt. Larry Carlisle of Cleveland, and will fight Edward Gregory of Brooklyn tonight. Bantamweight Ricky Carreras of New York City decisioned Fred Bryant of Trenton, N.J., and tonight will confront James Kenty of Columbus, Ohio.

RIVERA

Hamilton light flyweight Claudio (Chicky) Rivera of Brooklyn, meanwhile, lost to David Armstrong of Tacoma, Wash.

Winners will not necessarily make the Olympic team. A challenger will be selected from the field of losers to battle the champion at a later date. If the champion wins again, his berth is assured. Should he lose, yet another fight would be held to determine the Olympic representative.

"This is something I've worked for ever since I've started boxing," said Wells after moving into the finals against Bobick, who has beaten him four straight times.

'GOING TO WIN'

"How am I going to fight him differently this time? I'm going to win. I'm in better condition now and I'm moving and thinking a lot better."

Bobick was unmoved. "He looks good," conceded the Bowlus, Minn., brawler, "but maybe he has improved and maybe he hasn't. He probably has improved against other people. We'll see if he's improved against me."

Wells will take a 70-12 record into the fight. Bobick is 90-9, and has won 58 straight, including a semi-final knockout yesterday over Leroy Jones of Brooklyn in a mere 69 seconds.

Another outstanding fight tonight will pit lightweight James Busceme of Beaumont, Tex., against Norman Goins of Edinbrug, Ind.

Arm Ailment Ends Starr Grid Career

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—Bart Starr, the man who directed the dynasty of the Green Bay Packers in the 1960s, gave in to an ailing arm Friday and said he was quitting as an active player.

The 38-year-old Starr had announced just three weeks ago that he planned to play this season.

But Friday morning, after a third successive sleepless night because of the throbbing pain in his right shoulder, Starr left the Packers' St. Norbert College training camp and drove home. It was 7:30 in the morning when he told his wife, Cherry, of his decision and just two hours later he went to the Packer offices and met with Coach Dan Devine.

A news conference was hastily called and the decision finally announced.

STARTER

Starr, a 17th-round draft choice in 1956, rose to glory under the late Coach Vince Lombardi. He became a starter late in the 1959 season and led Green Bay to National Football League championships in 1961, 1962, 1965, 1966 and 1967 and to Super Bowl wins in 1966 and 1967.

He led the NFL in passing three times and held or holds several NFL records for completion consistency and low interception percentage.

SHOULDER

Starr was flanked by his wife and Devine at the emotion-packed news conference at which he admitted failure to recover from a pair of operations on his arm and shoulder prior to the 1971 season.

"I have exhausted every effort to recover from the pain I have experienced in my arm," he said. "After some 10 days of consultation with our doctors and the realization that my shoulder problem is continually aggravated by throwing I have decided to announce my retirement."

FAMILY TIME

Starr said he had no immediate plans except that he was going to spend some time with his family for the next few days. Both he and Devine said they would talk about the possibility of Starr's remaining associated with the Packers, possibly as a coach.

Starr's retirement leaves Devine with an extremely young quarterback corps.

Scott Hunter, who started several games as a rookie last year, was tabbed by Devine as Starr's "successor."

Little used Frank Patrick and rookie Jerry Tagge, now in the College All-Star camp, are Green Bay's other quarterbacks.

Melnyk Bid To Meet Golf Expectations

AKRON, Ohio (UPI)—For at least three years, or ever since he won a decisive victory in the 1969 U. S. Amateur, people have been predicting a great future as a golf pro for Steve Melnyk.

This may just be the week he starts living up to it.

Melnyk, who says "I can play as well as anyone," had a share of the lead going into today's third round of the American Golf Classic and thinks it may be because he finally decided to start playing for himself instead of for other peoples' expectations.

Melnyk shot a two-under-par 68 in Friday's second round, tying slumping Bert Yancey and Ray Floyd for the 36-hole lead at 137, a stroke ahead of Arnold Palmer and Jim Wischere.

Yancey, who thought the course was too dry, also had a 68 Friday while Floyd, who thought it was too wet, shot 71. But Palmer, who had no com-

Wilhelm's 20-Year Stint Appears Over

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —Hoyt Wilhelm's 20-year career in the major leagues appeared at an end today as the Los Angeles Dodgers asked irrevocable waivers on the 48-year-old relief pitcher preliminary to releasing him.

The veteran knuckleball specialist could be claimed until next Thursday by another club, after which time he will be a free agent and can attempt to line up a job for himself.

Wilhelm has pitched in 1,070 games, more than any player in the history of the major leagues, and holds numerous records as a relief hurler.

The Dodger decision to release Wilhelm came five days before his 49th birthday next Wednesday, but the soft-spoken pitcher will not be without a job even if no other major league club picks him up.

The Dodgers have offered Wilhelm a spot as a pitching instructor in their minor league system.

This year Wilhelm has appeared in 16 games and has an 0-1 record with one save and an earned run average of 4.68 as compared with his lifetime ERA of 2.50 going into this season.

Just as the Dodgers brought Wilhelm up from the minors last season, there was a chance another major league club might need his knuckleball. Los Angeles purchased his contract last August from its Spokane farm club, where Wilhelm had gone after being released by the Atlanta Braves.

It was in 1952 that the Huntersville, N.C., native came up with the New York Giants where he spent five seasons. He then went to the St. Louis Cardinals, Baltimore Orioles, Cleveland Indians, Chicago White Sox, California Angels, Chicago Cubs and Atlanta before coming to the Dodgers.

Wilhem is the only pitcher in major league history to have appeared in more than 1,000 games. He holds the major league record of 124 wins by a relief pitcher. Other marks to his credit are most games finished by a pitcher, 651; most games worked in relief; 1018; most innings in relief, 1,870.

Wilhelm started his record performances in 1952 when he set a National League mark of 73 games for a rookie.

No Athlete Salary Freeze

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Citing "short earning lives" of professional athletes, the Cost of Living Council has exempted from wage controls football, baseball, basketball and hockey players, managers and coaches.

The exemption does not apply to prices charged for admission, which will remain under controls that took effect last Aug. 15.

"The Council took this action to correct the inequities which arise from imposing controls on the short earning lives which professional athletes experience relative to wage earners in other sectors of the economy," the Council said in a statement Friday.

"Equally significant was the fact that unlike other wage earners many professional athletes are normally restricted by contract from changing jobs to obtain higher salaries."

CONTROLLED

The Council also noted that some U.S. players are controlled by team owners in foreign countries, which could result in them being involved in "confusing wage negotiations and inequitable payments" compared to players controlled by U.S. teams.

The Council said it defined professional athletes as those who make their living by performing in "competitive sporting events requiring physical agility or strength."

PAY BOARD

The decision to include managers and coaches under the exemption, it said, was made at the recommendation of the Pay Board because their "income characteristics" were similar to those of professional athletes. It added that the same exemption was granted under the Korean War stabilization program.

"This exemption does not affect the pay of other personnel employed by professional sports organizations, such as trainers, ticket cashiers and front office personnel or personnel who act as agents or managers for individual athletes," the Council said.

IMPACT

The Council said the economic impact of its action would be slight because total compensation to players in the four biggest professional sports — football, baseball, basketball and hockey —was about equal to the revenue of "a single Tier II firm," or a company with annual sales of between $50 million and $100 million.

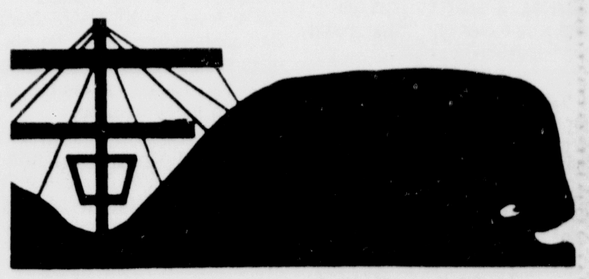

The Council also announced that it had fined the Chicago Black Hawks' hockey team $18,900 in civil penalties, plus court costs, for increasing the price of its hockey programs in violation of guidelines during both Phase I and Phase II of the Economic Stabilization Program. It said the Black Hawks raised prices from 50 cents to 75 cents starting with the first game of the 1971-72 season Oct. 10 and that the U.S. District Court for the northern district of Illinois had enjoined the team from instituting that increase.

Jackie Evans Leads Raleigh Golf Tourney

RALEIGH, N. C. (UPI)—Former Kansas Women's Amateur champ Jackie Evans managed to survive Friday's 90-degree heat at the Raleigh Golf Classic and shoot the best round of her young professional career.

The 22-year-old rookie took a one stroke lead into the second round of the $20,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association event today on the strength of her opening round 68, four under par.

One stroke back was Judy Rankin at 69.

Little Morgan Has Big Power

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Cincinnati's Joe Morgan is an enigma.

The National League All-Star second baseman is only 5-foot-7, but he occasionally unleashes the batting power of sluggers nearly a foot taller.

Last night was one of those occasions as he drove in four runs with a pair of homers to lead the Reds' come-from-behind 11-5 victory over Pittsburgh. The little belter, who has never hit more than 15 round-trippers in a season, already has 12 this season.

In other National League games, New York beat San Francisco 3-1, St. Louis topped Atlanta 2-1, Los Angeles blanked Philadelphia 3-0, San Diego edged Montreal 5-4 and Chicago routed Houston 11-3.

Bob Gibson posted his 11th straight triumph with a seven-hitter and also won his own game with a homer as the Cardinals edged the Braves. Gibson, boosting his record to 11-5, hit his fourth homer of the year in the sixth inning to give the Cards a 2-0 lead then was tagged for a solo homer by Darrell Evans in the seventh.

Don Sutton tossed a five-hitter for his 12th victory of the year and Wes Parker belted a two-run homer to help the Dodgers to a victory over the Phillies. Sutton walked only one and struck out five in tying Houston's Larry Dierker for the NL lead in shutouts with five.

San Diego rallied for four runs in the last of the ninth to nip Houston, with Nate Colbert's sacrifice fly driving home the winning run. The Padres loaded the bases with none out against Bill Stoneman in the ninth and Derrel Thomas greeted reliever Mike Marshall with a two-run single. When centerfielder Ron Woods threw the ball into the Montreal dugout, the tying run crossed the plate.

Billy Williams drove in six runs with his 22nd homer, a double and two singles to pace the Cubs' victory over the Astros. Williams boosted his batting average to .342 with his display and upped his runs batted in total to 62. Joe Pepitone also homered for the Cubs while Jim Wynn, Doug Rader and Cesar Cedeno homered for the Astros.

ELEVEN OTHERS

Eleven other players were within three shots of the lead. Dave Eichelberger, whose 65 was the best round Friday, led a group of seven at 139 and there were four more at 140.

Eichelberger, J. C. Snead, Gibby Gilbert, Kermit Zarley, Tom Ulozas, Mike Hill and Hale Irwin all were at 139, while first-round leader Ron Cerrudo of Napa, who ballooned to 75 Friday, Ken Still, Mike Reasor and Jerry McGee were at 140.

Friday, Floyd made only one bogey until the final two holes, then he bogeyed both of them, missing a six-foot putt on 17 and a 12-footer on 12 that would have salvaged pars.

Yancey, like Floyd, searching for the missing something that helped him win more than $80,000 each of the last three years—and just $30,316 this year—summed up simply a recent upswing in his game.

Six of the top 21 moneywinners on this year's tour failed to survive the 36-hole cut including Tom Weiskopf (No. 5) and Bruce Crampton (No. 6). Crampton, however, went out with a flourish, scoring an eagle deuce on his final hole.

The East San Rafael minor league Bobby Sox all-stars were scheduled to begin play in the Area tournament in Belmont this afternoon at 4 p.m. against Sebastopol.

Babe Ruth Win Aided By Connor

Jim Connor pitched a three-hitter and scored two of the three runs he needed as he led Central Marin to a 3-1 victory yesterday over Country Youth Club of Santa Rosa in the District 9 Babe Ruth League 13-year-old baseball tournament.

In the other contest, Steve Derenzo drove in three runs and Jack Ford and Lance Phillips each knocked in two as Northgate blasted Terra Linda, 17-5.

Sonoma, which achieved a 7-2 victory over Redwood Empire of Sonoma County Thursday, forfeited the game due to an ineligible player.

Today's schedule calls for six games: Redwood Empire vs. Novato at San Marin High School, 9:15 a.m.; Santa Rosa-Sonoma, Novato High, 10; Northgate-Central Marin, San Marin, noon; Terra Linda-Country Youth Club, Novato, 1 p.m.; Rohnert Park vs. winner of 10 a.m. game, San Marin, 2:45; and winner of 1 p.m. game vs. loser of 9:15 game, San Marin, 5:30.

Marinwood In Seniors Victory Over Fairfax

Marinwood-Lucas Valley defeated Fairfax yesterday, 10-5, in a senior league baseball game at Hamilton Air Force Base which was called due to darkness after five innings.

The losers were ousted from the double-elimination tournament. The winners were to meet San Rafael for the championship today at noon.

San Rafael could clinch the title with a victory. A Marinwood-Lucas Valley triumph would necessitate a second game for the title immediately following the first.

Sohner Tops Perry's In District Tourney

Randy McNeally hit a bases-loaded triple in the second inning and Mal Smith went on to pitch steady ball as Sohner Tree Service defeated Perry's Delicatessen, 5-1, in a meeting of Marin County's two representatives last night in the Tri-Country District softball tournament in Santa Rosa.

Perry's was ousted from the double-elimination tournament, while Sohner will conticue play tomorrow.

McPherson Bowling Rivalry

Some sibling rivalry.

The McPhersons of San Rafael, brothers Rich, 20 and Mike, 17, along with sisterNancy, 15, who have been bowling out of San Rafael's Country Club Bowl, are taking their rivalry south, to San Francisco and Riverside.

Their family bowling prowess or rivalry, if you will, has carried them into the top 15 standings after 24 games of qualifying in the juniors in San Francisco.

Rich, the oldest, leads the male McPhersons in this tournament ranking. He is fifth in the boys category, 10 notches ahead of brother Mike.

Not to be outdone by her brothers, Nancy is fifth in the girls group.

In their latest Castle Lanes endeavors, Rich turned in the top four-game series in the family with a 786, 16 pins better than Mike, but Mike has the high game, a 230. Nancy compiled a 743 series.

Today and tomorrow, the McPherson trio along with San Rafael's Kent Dlugokenski are in the State Juniors Bowling Tournament at Riverside, which continues for the next two weekends.

In this southland competition, the McPhersons and Dlugokenski will take part in the singles and team activities.

2 Pitchers Lift Little League Teams To Finals

Sean McCaffrey and Jay Hodgson, who earlier in the tournament had pitched no-hitters, came back yesterday with two-hit performances to hurl their teams into today's finals in the Little League county team championship.

McCaffrey's Mill Valley American Tigers and Hodgson's Marinwood-Lucas Valley Caps were to meet for the title today at 1 p.m. at the Tigers' field near Boyle Park in Mill Valley.

McCaffrey and John Shimmin hit back-to-back doubles in the fifth inning yesterday for the only two runs as the Tigers defeated the Novato American Twins, 2-0, at Boyle Park.

Bill Weinmann hit a two-run double in the top of the seventh inning to give the Caps all the runs they needed against the Hamilton-Loma Verde Giants at Joe Wagner Field in Larkspur. The Giants' Mark Bosia retaliated with a home run in the bottom of the seventh, ruining Hodgson's no-hitter, but the Caps survived.

West Signs 2-Year Pact With Lakers

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

LOS ANGELES — All-star guard Jerry West disclosed Friday he had signed a new two-year contract with the Los Angeles Lakers basketball club and friends of the veteran said he would receive around $300,000.

West, 34, would not confirm the figure but it was reported he has asked Lakers' owner Jack Kent Cooke for a two-year contract at $300,000 a year.

West had vowed he would remain with the Lakers until they won a league championship and he was a key figure in the Los Angeles team's greatest season which was climaxed with the National Basketball Association title last season.

Tennis

SANTIAGO, Chile — The youngest member of the United States Davis Cup tennis team held the key today to victory over Chile in the American Zone Final of competition.

Harold Solomon, 19, of Silver Springs, Md., split 9-7 and 4-6 sets Friday with veteran Patricio Cornejo in a 177-minute battle that electrified a record crowd before darkness halted play.

The match continued today. Also, Stan Smith and Erik Van Dillen teamed up for doubles against Jaime Fillol and Jaime Pinto. The final singles matches will be held Sunday.

Smith, winner of the Wimbledon singles title last month, overpowered Pinto, 6-1, 7-5, 6-2, in the opening match Friday to give the United States a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five series.

Football

READING, Pa. — The Philadelphia Eagles have three gaping holes in their defensive unit and it may take big dollar signs to fill them.

Hard-hitting defensive tackle Ernie Calloway left the latest gap in the team's defensive alignment when he took his 6-6, 250-pound frame out of training camp Thursday in a huff over his new three-year contract.

The Eagles have been toiling since camp opened Sunday without their All-Pro safety Bill Bradley and linebacker Tom Rossovich, who are negotiating as a unit for substantial ualary hikes. The two are said to be working out secretly in Philadelphia, awaiting word from General Manager Pete Retzlaff.

Fontanetti's, Del Rio Win In Tournament

Fontanetti's of Santa Cruz defeated Concord Disposal, 2-1, and Del Rio Golf Shop of Modesto upset the Le Blanc Barons of Sunnyvale, 2-0 in the Suburban Auto of San Rafael Invitational Softball Tournament last night at Albert Park.

The double-elimination tournament will continue today and tomorrow, with the championship game set for 5 p.m. tomorrow.

How did Fox feel about the blow?

"The same as I do when anyone hits a homer off one of my pitchers," he said, "real horsefeathers."

The victory helped the Mets shave a game off Pittsburgh's lead in the National League East, which now stands at 4 1-2 games over New York. The Giants, meanwhile, failed to gain ground in their fight to move up in the N.L. West.

And all because of a guy named Mays.

Detroit's Lolich First To Win 17

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Detroit General Manager Jim Campbell calls Mickey Lolich "the best pitcher in baseball" but the veteran lefthander would probably be glad just to earn the distinction of being the best pitcher in the American League.

Lolich became the major league's first 17 game winner Friday night and the first pitcher to hurl 17 complete games this season as the Tigers defeated the Texas Rangers 3-1 behind Norm Cash's two-run homer.

Lolich, in his 10th season with Detroit, won 25 games last year and voiced some dissatisfaction over the selection of early-season sensation Vida Blue for Cy Young Award honors in the American League. Lolich, the workhorse of the majors last season with 376 innings pitched and 29 complete games, finished with one more victory than Blue.

But Lolich has been the complete pitcher this season.

STRIKEOUTS

Lolich, who fanned five, took over the American League's strikeout lead against Texas from Nolan Ryan, who had 153 through Thursday's game. Lolich, whose record is now 17-6, has 155 strikeouts.

"I haven't thought about winning 30 games, but I believe I have a good chance at 20," Lolich said tongue-in-cheek in response to questions. Detroit Manager Billy Martin has considered having Lolich start Sunday with one day's rest so that the club's top pitcher would be kept out of Tuesday's All-Star game and escape possible injury.

"Its up to Lolich," Martin said. "If it's stiff Saturday it could be a different story. But we didn't play all these games just for the All-Star game. The All-Star game is second...the season comes first."

OTHER GAMES

In other American League action Baltimore edged Kansas City 7-6, Cleveland defeated Chicago 8-2, Boston nipped Oakland 5-4 in 14 innings, New York swept a doubleheader from California 6-0 and 3-0 and Milwaukee blanked Minnestoa 2-0.

Boog Powell drove in two runs with a single and a towering home run as Baltimore scored four runs in the first four innings and then held on to snuff out a late Kansas City rally.

A pair of four-hitters by Fritz Peterson and Mel Stottlemyre plus a five home run barrage carried the Yankees to their doubleheader sweep over the Angels.

After Peterson notched his ninth victory in the opener, Stottlemyre came back to continue his uncanny spell over the Angels for his 10th victory.

THREE RUNS

Jack Brohamer and Tom McCraw drove in three runs apiece and Dick Tidrow limited Chicago to seven hits as the Indians dealt Tom Bradley his fifth straight loss.

Ellie Rodriguez, returning to the lineup after a week's absence because of illness, doubled home Dave May and then scored himself on pitcher Bill Parsons' sacrifice fly to give Milwaukee its victory over Minnesota.

Group Forms For Rancho Cotate Stadium Lights

An organization intending to raise money for installation of stadium lights and other facilities at the Rancho Cotate High School field has been formed in Rohnert Park.

Dubbed the Rohnert Park Stadium Fund Committee, the group last Friday elected Rohnert Park councilman Lou Beary as President.

Preliminary estimates indicated that a sum exceeding $100,000 would be needed to make the improvements, the group reported. Money is expected to come from sponsors, donors and membership fees. Former Rohnert Park mayor Jimmy Rogers was named fund drive chairman by Beary.

Membership is open to the public at $5 a year for single memberships, $15 for family memberships and $100 for sponsors. For further information, write the Committee at P.O. Box 1292, Rohnert Park 94928.

Santa Barbara Scrimmage For 49ers Slated

SANTA BARBARA (UPI)— The San Francisco 49ers, with their first exhibition game of the new season only two weeks away, hold a full contact scrimmage inside the University of California-Santa Barbara Stadium today, and it will be closed to the public.

Coach Dick Nolan, working with a relatively small squad of 66 players, said he doesn't want to waste a single day of work because of the early start this year of the exhibition season. The 49ers open up against the New York Jets in Jacksonville, Fla., on Aug. 5.

The club went through a two-hour drill Friday, the last 20 minutes of which included contact scrimmage.

Marinite Netters Victorious

Marin County tennis players prospered yesterday in places as near as San Francisco and as far away as Dayton, Ohio.

Barry MacKay of Ross, momentarily sidestepping his duties of running the upcoming Redwood Bank Invitational tournament, picked up a racket instead of a pencil and won his quarter-final match in the Marshall Ward Invitational at Golden Gateway in the City.

He defeated Charles Hoeveler, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

John Zwieg of Greenbrae will play Friday in the same tournament against Greg Shepard of San Francisco.

In Santa Clara, Charles Bolcom of Belvedere won the boys 12 singles in the Patron's Tournament, defeating Greg Sherman of Alameda, 6-2, 6-1.

In Dayton, Bee Kilgore of Tiburon teamed with Valerie Mendoza of Sunnyvale to win the girls 18 doubles in the Western Clay Court championships. They defeated Ann Wilson and Leslie Carson of Dayton, 6-3, 6-3.

Novato '9' Tops Vallejo, Takes Legion Crown

Novato Post 540 yesterday won the second-half championship in the American Legion's District 5 by defeating Vallejo, 6-4, in a baseball game at Foley Park in Vallejo.

Greg Mazeres cracked a two-run double in the fourth inning to break Vallejo's back, and Ken Siler went on to pitch a complete game for the victory.

Jimmy Thompson went three-for-four for Novato, including two doubles, and Randy Jackson also cracked three hits in four trips. Each drove in a run.

Novato, which had tied Vallejo for the second-half title with a 5-1 record, now enters a best-of-three series with Petaluma for the over-all championship.

First two games will be held today at Veterans' Home in Yountville, beginning at noon. Third game, if necessary, will occur tomorrow at 2 p.m. at Novato High.

The Novato-Petaluma winner will advance to the Area playoff Thursday in Oroville.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

In Tournament Play, A Double May Help Foes Make Contract

Contract bridge is a game of penalty doubles. Your opponents get too ambitious, and you double them briskly, collecting 800 points here, 1,100 points there, and so on until it gets monotonous. Avoid applying this principle, however, when you are playing against a first-class opponent. Your double may tell him how to play the hand in such a way as to make his contract.

DOUBLING ACTION

West opened the six of diamonds after doubling four spades in a tone of unholy glee. Tim Seres, star of the Australian team in the recent World Bridge Olympiad, played a low diamond from dummy in the hope that East would find the lead mystifying.

East did. He put up the queen of diamonds in the hope that his partner had led from the king. Seres won with the ace of diamonds and now had four sure tricks in the suit.

HOLDS BREATH

Seres led the king of spades and held his breath. All would be well if East could follow suit. And East did, as his partner won with the ace of spades.

West returned the jack of spades to drive out the queen, and declarer now gave up a club. West took the queen of clubs and drew a third round of trumps with the ten. He then led the ace of clubs.

Declarer Ruffs

Declarer ruffed, led a diamond to dummy's jack and returned the jack of hearts to the ace. Then he cashed two top diamonds to discard hearts from the dummy and led the queen of hearts through West for a ruffing finesse.

West had to put up the king of hearts, and dummy ruffed. Now South took the rest with the last trump and the established nine of hearts.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes.

♠ - A J 10
♥ - K 5 3
♦ - 9 6 2
♣ - A Q 9 5.
Wht do you say?

Answer: Bid two clubs.

The hand is strong enough for a jump to three spades, but you should reserve this for a hand with four-card trump support. Show the clubs first and raise the spades later.

Two From Base Gain Degrees

Chief M/Sgt. Charles R. Sheeley, first sergeant of detachment 18, 4608th Support Squadron, Hamilton Air Force Base, has received the Golden Gate College associates award as the graduating senior with the highest grade point average.

Sheeley earned a bachelor's degree in business administration, majoring in management, with a 3.9 grade average. He was given a check for $100.

Capt. David L. Cohen, commander of detachment 18, completed his requirement for a master's degree in public administration, with a perfect 4.0 average.

Pigeon Protest

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (UPI)—A drive by city hall officials to eradicate wild pigeons living in nearby houses and spires by poisoning them has brought sharp opposition by sidewalk vendors in the neighborhood. They make a profitable living by selling popcorn to local and foreign visitors to feed the birds.

Dedicated Man Can Perform Wonders

THERE SEEMS TO BE no limit to what one man can do if he puts his whole mind and heart to his task.

About 150 years ago in a poor Bavarian village a day's carriage drive from Nuremberg, there lived a protestant pastor named Wilhelm Loehe.

He had read the rather alarming reports from America distributed to protestant churches throughout the German states, telling that devout and devoted believers who emigrated to America were lost to the church, and presumably to God, because there were few German Lutheran Churches and only a handful of German Lutheran pastors in the great new land of opportunity across the sea.

Pastor Loehe was but one of many who received these reports and was disturbed. He was one of the very few who tried to do anything toward solving the problem.

His method was simple. He invited a few promising young men to come to live in his home while he tutored them in theology, preparing them to be pastors in America.

Within a few short years, he had sent a score of German protestant clergymen to America. Today, the various Lutheran churches in our country constitute the largest proportion of protestantism. The influence of the obscure preacher in the poor Bavarian village nearly 150 years ago is still felt in this way here today.

LEOHE RECEIVED MORE disturbing reports. All efforts to convert Indians to Lutheranism had failed miserably; the heathen natives remained heathen.

If only the Indians could see a community of dedicated, devout believers joyfully living the true Christian life, the Indians certainly would come voluntarily to learn the source of the great happiness and would then join the Christian community.

Such was Loehe's dream. All he need do to make it a reality was bring about the establishment of a new totally Christian community somewhere in the American wilderness where Indians abounded.

To head this community as its pastor and spiritual leader, he found a new recruit for his theological tutoring program. His new recruit was a kind of misfit who had only recently been released from prison after serving eight years of what had begun as a life sentence.

Altogether, Loehe initially recruited fewer than a dozen souls for this noble experiment, one of whom was his own stable boy, the castoff and disinherited son of a middle class family.

Loehe's motley handful landed in the wilds of Northern Michigan in 1845 and called their collection of log huts Frankenmuth, which translates Franconian courage.

You may have heard of Frankenmuth, Mich. It is a kind of tourist town today which attempts to maintain its Bavarian heritage in architecture, sing- ins, dancing and beer-drinking.

The parochial school of the Lutheran Church there is much larger and better equipped than are its public schools. Its Lutheran Church draws members from a wide area; its membership is greater than the population of Frankenmuth.

DURING ITS HISTORY, tiny Frankenmuth has sent more young men and women to Lutheran seminaries and Lutheran teachers' colleges than any other community in America.

While Loehe's dream of converting Indians was never very successful, the influence of his efforts has been astounding.

Loehe's poor Bavarian village of Neuendettelsau, an hour's drive now from Nuremburg, is today the headquarters of a thriving world-wide missionary operation. Theological training institutions are clustered there, although it remains esentially just one more Franconian farmers' village.

OUR OWN GOLDEN GATE Baptist Theological Seminary in Mill Valley is similarly today's result of the dedicated efforts of a former Arkansas ploughboy who died only a few years ago.

His name was Isam Hodges. As a youth, he became convinced that God wanted him to establish a theological seminary in the far West to train Baptist preachers. His determination to do this never wavered although his resources were always pitifully scant.

The intensity of his dedication to his goal attracted the support of others. Finally, after years of frustration, he started offering classes at a Baptist Church in Oakland with a volunteer faculty, nearly 30 years ago.

The seminary was a hand-to-mouth operation, surviving one economic crisis after another only because of Hodges' unwavering determination.

Finally, the California State Baptist Convention stepped in and took over responsibility for making the seminary succeed. Twelve years ago, after Southern Baptist Convention — a national body — took over operation of the school, it was brought to its present location on Strawberry Point overlooking Richardson Bay.

Fortunately, Pastor Hodges was able to be present for the groundbreaking at Strawberry. On that occasion, he recalled his early struggles to establish the seminary with no visible resources other than his personal dedication and determination. It must have been a day of great satisfaction for him.

To repeat, there seems to be no limit to what one can accomplish if he puts his whole mind and heart to his task.

It could also be said that some of the most forceful sermons are not shouted from the pulpit but taught by example. Both Loehe and Hodges communicated their powerful messages to many who never sat in their presence.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Renters At Fault; Not The Landlords

I am writing to you in response to your reporter Jay Goodwin's article regarding "Unfair Landlords" in your paper of July 14, 1972. I also would like to know if this prejudiced article has your approval.

I am a landlord for many years, but only in a small proportion with just a few rentals in Marin and San Francisco, but I want to tell you and your reporter that he ignored the landlords' side of the problem, of which I and others can give you facts and figures which justify the charges and the selection of suitable renters, because the landlord is responsible for the condition of his property, the loan payments, the taxes, the insurance, the maintenance and the repairs.

If your reporter feels that there is a discrimination, it is caused and created by the action of this group of undesirable renters, but not the landlords.

Humanitarian Gives Key To Happiness

I receive many requests from shut-ins, handicapped, blind and the lonely who desperately seek friendship and encouragement. It was these that induced me to write the following:

Making particular friends is like a game or contest; you must work at it. Be one yourself. . .make yourself desirable.

The key to a happy, joyful and advantageous life is a smile, a friendly, cheerful smile. . .

You should learn your friends' likes and dislikes, hobbies and pleasures. In other words, speak their language. Always display deep appreciation for things done in your behalf. Also, compliment your friends for any commendable activity. Be considerate and helpful and kind.

Never feel sorry for yourself. Instead, be concerned about those who are less fortunate than you are. Never seek sympathy. If your friends feel that sympathy is in order, it is their privilege. Be quick to apologize when in error or when something you did has offended them. In all dealings, honesty always pays off. Keep your promise.

Never boast about yourself.

If you cannot agree with your new acquaintances on a certain subject, do not oppose them. Remember, silence is golden. Occasionally, there is someone who rubs you the wrong way. When this happens, do not advertise it and never completely close the door against them. Remember that time changes all things, and your worst enemy could some day be your best friend.

Contact is important. After you acquire a new friend, make regular, periodic contacts through personal visits if possible or correspondence.

If you cannot read or write, you will have to depend on personal visits. . .There are many times that the writer of a letter to you is unaware that you are unable to correspond unless he is informed of this fact.

There is really no reason for you to be without the friends that you want and need. But you must go after them!

Remember that your smiling face, though it may be difficult, will open the door. And making yourself desirable will surely earn for you the friendship you craved. Good luck and God bless you.

George McGovern Isn't Asking; He's Begging For Dick Daley

WASHINGTON — The toughest job Sen. Tom Eagleton, the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, had after his nomination, was to try to persuade Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago to work for McGovern this year.

The meeting between the two men took place late Saturday night in Mayor Daley's office. Eagleton spoke first

"Dick, we sure missed you last week in Miami. Everyone said it just didn't seem like a Democratic National Convention without Richard Daley."

"I DIDN'T COME because I didn't have a seat."

"We suddenly realized that midway in the convention, and I want you to know it was a terrible oversight. As a matter of fact, we had a box seat set aside for you right next to the podium."

"I didn't have a seat with the Illinois delegation."

"THE ILLINOIS delegation had lousy seats. You wouldn't have seen anything from there."

"I was elected as a delegate and they wouldn't seat me."

"Yes, that was brought to our attention. There was some question about the new reform rules, Dick. We wanted to seat you in the worst way, but we had no control over it. It was an open convention, and the delegates were tired and hot. They probably didn't even know what they were voting on."

"THEY KNEW what they were voting on. They were voting to take away my seat."

"I want to assure you, Dick, that Sen. George McGovern wanted you seated. I'll never forget the final morning of the convention, at 3:30 a.m., when all of us stood holding our hands high to show that the party was united, George said to me, 'My cup would runneth over if Dick Daley was here to share this moment with me.'"

"He didn't say that."

"HE SAID something like it. There was so much noise I didn't hear his exact words. Look, Dick, the important thing is to beat Richard Nixon in November. We can't do it without winning Illinois. And we can't win Illinois without you."

"You should have thought about that when you took away my seat."

"It was hot and muggy and rained a lot in Miami. You would have hated it. Frankly you were much better off watching the convention on television."

"I KNOW ONE thing: If they had held the convention in Chicago like I wanted them to, no one would have taken away my seat."

"That's exactly what I told George. I said, 'If the Democratic convention had been held in Chicago, we wouldn't have had a Dick Daley problem.'"

"I know how to take care of people who take away other people's seats."

"We know you do, Dick, and that's why we need you in November."

"Anyone who sat in my chair would have got his head cracked open."

"NOW THIS IS what we plan to do. We'd like to make you chairman of the McGovern drive in Illinois. You run it any way you want to."

"If they had tried to take my seat away from me in Chicago, they would have gotten a snootful of tear gas."

"Dick, forget the past. We have to think ahead. We need a Democrat in the White House. George isn't asking, he's begging."

"Anyone touches my chair in Chicago gets his car towed away."

"But what's your answer, Dick?"

"Tell him I'm going to sit on it."

Awesome Power Of President: Settle War Before November

WASHINGTON — We are seeing the power of the Presidency orchestrated on a half-dozen themes that touch every voter in the land. In the age of television it is a power that gives the incumbent, leaving everything else aside, a three or four to one advantage.

For the man in the office it is deeds not words, and deeds recounted to the millions in prime time. A telephone call from the White House — the President has a major announcement to make to the American people —is all that it takes. And while the Democrats may cry for equal time on some of these major announcements they are likely more often than not to lose out.

THE DEED JUST over the horizon is far and away the most important. It is a negotiated settlement of the Vietnam war with a face-saving device for both sides.

The orchestra is sounding the initial theme, the hopeful hints coming from the secretary of state, from Henry Kissinger, from a variety of sources. Le Duc Tho, Hanoi's chief negotiator, arriving in Paris, said he would be happy to resume secret talks with Kissinger. When these first intimations will build into a triumphant crescendo, no one can say. It may be as late as October, which would be great timing.

A bit of news largely lost sight of in the brouhaha of the convention was evermore meaningful than the hints out of the White House. Pierre Mendes-France, the French premier during the ciritical weeks of 1954 and the Indochina conference in Geneva, predicted a settlement negotiated in such a way that both sides could claim a face-saving end of the fighting.

MENDES-FRANCE rode the turbulent tide of French politics to bring an end to eight years of French involvement in the swamp of an Asian land war. He is close to Hanoi, close to Cambodia's exiled Prince Sihanouk and in recent months he has been in both Peking and Moscow. In an interview in that distinguished newspaper, Le Monde, this wise elder statesman who tried to build a bridge between East and West in the Indochina settlement did not qualify his prediction.

The Democrats will say, as they are already saying, that President Nixon could have made the concessions paving the way for a settlement a year and a half or two years ago. However demonstrable that may be, it will carry little weight with the average voter rejoicing that the endless war is at last coming to an end. Looking back after the fashion of Lot's wife is to see that original sin — the scuttling of the Indochina settlement — brought the fearful toll of 50,000 American dead, thousands and thousands wounded, and, the countryside and the people of Vietnam ravaged.

ON THE EVE of the Democratic convention the President announced a $750 million grain deal with the Soviet Union. The meaning of the largest deal ever between two powers for American grain farmers was duly underscored by Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz. A skillful negotiator, Secretary of Commerce Peter Peterson, chairman of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade Commission, is on his way to Moscow and similar impressive deals will be forthcoming.

This is the beginning of the harvest of the agreements reached during the President's mission to the Soviet Union. It is power politics played with consummate skill. However distasteful it may be to old-fashioned radicals of the right who talk about the sacrifice of principle, it has begun to work a transformation in the world with such corollary consequences as the first steps between the two Koreas to come together.

AS A CENTER of power the Presidency has long been a formidable officer. But more than ever before the reins of power are concentrated in the Nixon White House. The reasons are not hard to find. A defense budget of $83 billion, with another $5 billion for space, gives the President powerful leverage on the economy. Even if that leverage is used with a scrupulous detachment from the political consequences of whether a big defense contract is to go to one community or another, it is a political gold mine.

Moscow, in the game of power politics, is said to believe in the President's re-election as insurance for the on-going agreements. With a certain irony during Mr. Nixon's stay in the Kremlin a calculation was made that perhaps he wielded more concentrated authority than even Leonid Brezhnev, no. 1 in the hierarchy.

Soviet Stance Paves Way For Egypt-Israel Negotiations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Egypt has changed the character of its alliance with Russia, but not broken that alliance or reduced Russia's military presence in the Eastern Mediterranean.

This is the preliminary assessment by intelligence and diplomatic communities here of the news from Cairo.

THE CHANGES are welcome. They are regarded as definitely improving the conditions for real negotiations between Egypt and Israel. They expose and confirm an existing assumption in these communities here that Moscow is solidly against any effort by Egypt to regain its lost territories by force of arms.

But, there is no reason yet known here to think that there will be fewer Russian warships in the Mediterranean or fewer Russian warplanes flying around the Middle East, or any less Russian influence on the sources of Mid-East oil.

ANOTHER WAY OF stating all this is that Russia continues to be a power in the Middle East but has itself limited the use of that power in a manner which just could be constructive. It is not allowing the Egyptians to use the Russian presence as a means for a reconquest of the Sinai Peninsula. If the Egyptians want any part of their lost territories back, they are going to have to try for it through direct negotiations with Israel.

Egypt has retaliated by telling the Russians to take a lot of their people out of Egypt. But this is not a total expulsion of all Russians as happened when the Chinese broke with Russia. It is an expulsion of those Russians who have been serving with Egyptians ground troops and rubbing shoulders on the streets of Cairo with Egyptian citizens.

And it involves a reclaiming of Egyptian sovereignty over naval and air bases. The commanding officers at all bases apparently are to be Egyptians now, not Russians. It is about half of what France did to American military forces there. The French expelled all, but remained in the alliance. The Egyptians are expelling those who irritated Egyptians. But Russia continues to enjoy naval and air bases.

IN OTHER WORDS the new situation, as read here, is that Egypt ceases to be a satellite of Russia, but remains in a limited alliance for mutual interest. Egypt will (presumably) get a regular flow of military supplies sufficient to maintain its present defensive posture against Israel. It couldn't get these from any other source. And in return Russia can continue to base its military presence in the Eastern Mediterranean in Egypt.

Intelligence sources here say that this new condition has been building up from well before President Nixon's visit to Moscow. Incidents of friction between Russians and Egyptians have been reported frequently for over a year. Russia's refusal to underwrite and supply an Egyptian offensive into the Sinai also dates from that far back.

WASHINGTON, NATURALLY, would have preferred a total expulsion of all Russians from Egypt. But to expect that would have been unrealistic. Russia does have an established presence. It is one of the facts of modern life in the Middle East. The practical question is not how to get rid of it, but the role it will play.

At the moment its role seems to be restrained for the purpose of avoiding any confrontation with the United States. Also, present Russian policy seems to aim at avoiding any alarms among the West Europeans.

THE IMPLICATION to Israel, as read here, is that Russia has backed away from sponsoring any Egyptian military offensive against Israel. Egypt has plenty of defensive arms. But Moscow has called off its own "cold war" against Israel, Zionists, and Jews in general.

All of which seems to mean that if Mr. Sadat is ever to get back any of his lost territories, he will have to deal directly with Israel.

Profile Of A Marinite

Busy Dealer George Dexter, King Of Marin's Auto Row With Four Thriving Firms, Eyes Still More Horizons

By WAT TAKESHITA

George H. Dexter, the king of Marin's Auto Row, always loved cars. But it was a fluke sale he made during the post-war car scarcitythat really got him started in the automobile business.

It was 1946, and he was a wounded veteran just back from duty in Guam with the infantry and recuperating at Letterman Hospital in San Francisco. The big city looked good to a 23-year-old youth from Kansas. After three years of military service during which jeep rides were a luxury, the sleek new cars on Van Ness Avenue were especially appealing. But they were hard to come by.

"SO I PUT down $100 deposits at about 15 car dealers to make sure I'd get at least one car," recalls Dexter. Sure enough, Waters Chrysler-Plymouth came up with a new Plymouth. He drove it back to Letterman to find a message that Howard Buick also had a new Buick waiting for him.

Dexter wanted the Buick so badly that he went to Horsetrader Ed Shapiro to sell his brand new Plymouth, and made $300 on the deal. That was big money for young Dexter. "More than I could make in a month back in Kansas."

He promptly went to work for Horsetrader Ed as a buyer. Little did he know then that he was to parlay that $300 into a thriving business that would gross more than 10 million dollars a year.

Dexter, 48, now operates four dealerships — Annex Motors Volvo-Datsun, Dexter Toyota, Annex British Cars and Auto Fair (American Motors and Subaru). And he is looking for further expansion, with an eye to another dealership or two.

WHAT IS THE secret of his success?

"Well," shurgged Dexter. "I guess it'u just staying with the trend. We're fortunate to be dealing in foreign cars when foreign cars are getting hot."

He said that the automobile business goes in cycles. "In 1950, remember the Olds Rocket 88? That was THE car. Then from 1959 on, Pontiacs were real hot, and from 1968 on, the foreign cars started getting hot."

The preference for foreign cars is particularly strong in Marin County, he noted.

"People in Marin really go for the small foreign car for some reason," said Dexter. "Rgiht now, 35 to 40 per cent of cars sold in Marin are foreign cars. That's the highest percentage in the country."

DEXTER LEARNED the fundamentals of the auto business on Van Ness Avenue in San Francisco. After a year with Horsetrader Ed, he worked for Don Gilmore Chevrolet for a year and a half and for George Daniels Pontiac for another year and a half.

Then in 1949, he joined the Cadillac Motor Division and stayed for five years, becoming the first salesman at Cadillac's Stonestown outlet in 1953. He broke sales records for Cadillac from 1953 to 1955.

With this experience, Dexter moved into Marin in May of 1955 with his first used car lot, in Corte Madera where the California Highway Patrol office is now located.

"We were going great guns until the 1955-56 storms flooded us out," said Dexter. But his spirits remained undampened.

IN THE SPRING of 1956, he opened Dexter's Used Car Co. at Fourth and H streets in San Rafael. In September of 1957, he added the Rambler dealership across the street from his used car company in a building where the Mayfair Market is now located. Old-timers still remember the two giant bears that dominated his display window there.

In 1962, Dexter bought Redwood Motors (Volvo) at Fourth and H streets and called it Annex Motors. That was his first entry into the foreign car field. In 1966, he sold the Rambler dealership to American Motors and moved to Dexter Pontiac and GMC Trucks at Fourth and E Streets in San Rafael.

It was during this period that Dexter began surging into the forefront among Marin auto dealers.

In 1967 he got the Datsun dealership for Annex Motors and moved the following year to 535 Francisco Blvd., San Rafael's Auto Row. He followed that by buying the Toyota dealership in Larkspur in 1969 when Hil Probert died.

THE LARKSPUR site was far too cramped for the booming Toyota sales, and Dexter opened a new Toyota showroom and service building on Francisco Boulevard in January of 1971.

In the meantime, in May of 1970, he had shed the Pontiac-GMC dealership, selling it to Bianco Motors.

In February of 1971, Dexter reached northward into Novato and bought Anderson Motor Co. and called it the Auto Fair, dealing in American Motors and Subaru.

He capped the series of successful moves by buying out E.F. Sweeney British Cars in March of 1972.

Dexter's sales have been sensational since he began dealing in foreign cars. When he took over the Volvo in San Rafael, they were selling about eight or nine a month. Dexter pushed that to 35 per month. Probert Motors in Larkspur, he said, was selling 14 to 15 Toyotas per month. Last year, Dexter Toyota sold 940 vehicles, or 78 per month.

Dexter has just taken in William Beedle of Novato, who has been with Dexter for 11 years, as a junior partner in the highly successful Annex Motors Volvo and Datsun, which last year grossed four and a half million dollard in sales. Sales at Dexter Toyota are running almost neck and neck with Annex Motors.

DEXTER WAS born in Marysville, Kans., on Oct. 17, 1923, attended schools there and took a business course at Kansas State University. He met his present wife, Jeri Spagna, in San Francisco and married her in 1956. Jeri Dexter is past president of the Marin Mannequin League.

He has two daughters, Diane Schweitzer of San Anselmo and Georjean Dexter of Fairfax, and a son, Gregory Dexter, who lives at the Dexter home in San Anselmo.

How about the future?

"I'll just keep going on what I have," said Dexter. But already, he's eyeing new horizons.

HE HAS purchased property next to the old Sweeney British Cars, the site of a wine-tasting room, with hopes of opening up another car dealership. He also leased the Marin Bay Lincoln-Mercury building at Third Street and Lincoln Avenue in downtown San Rafael. As soon as Herk L. Viglienzone moves his Lincoln-Mercury agency into his new building on Francisco Boulevard, Dexter will transfer his Auto Fair from Novato to Third and Lincoln.

Success hasn't spoiled Dexter. He still puts in a full week, moving from agency to agency to keep personal supervision over a growing empire that threatens to engulf most of Auto Row.

Blind Boatbuilder Wouldn't Give Up His Dream Of Ships

Omundson Yard Is Now In Its Seventh Year

By MARTHA HANNON

What just has to be the rarest boatworks in the world continues to run full tilt, five days a week, in a ramshackle, ex-government garage at Point Reyes Station.

Why is the small, but growing Omundson Boat Works on West Marin's wind scoured coast, 35 miles northwest of the Golden Gate, the only one of its kind?

Because John D. Omundson — owner, hull designer and sole shipwright — is totally blind — the only blind boatbuilder on earth as far as anyone knows. And that is only one way the gritty Norwegian is completely "out-of-sight."

FOR AN OPENER, John flatly refused to give up the dwindling, but demanding art of building all hand-fitted, wooden ships in 1965, the year his optical nerves were destroyed in a backlash from diabetes. Equally amazing, John turned that initially traumatic setback into "my golden opportunity to go for broke and start my own boatworks."

It was a dream John had harbored the preceding 15 years while he had worked for other West Coast shipbuilding firms, but which he lacked the nerve to turn into reality until he couldn't see.

The fourth generation boatbuilder was then 33 years old, a family man with a wife, Doris, and two teen-age children, Katie and Dale.

"I COULD NOT see forsaking my life's work, work that I knew best and enjoyed most, for a less demanding, perhaps less dangerous job. After adjusting to the darkness, building boats blindly was not really that hard, since much of any boatwright's work is done by feel and instinct . . . eyes or no eyes. Welfare was out. That's for the needy and the old. I was still a young man. My God-given talents hadn't changed and I still had a family to support, Katie and Dale to educate.

"Besides, I have always believed that a man who is able-bodied should earn his living, not merely collect it."

John Omundson was not just whistling his off-key version of "Shenandoah."

SIX MONTHS after losing his eyesight, John had completed an intensive and inspirational course in Braille and cane travel at the Orientation Center for the Blind in Albany, Calif. The tenacious craftsman then laid out his boat shop, and single-handedly installed a full battery of manual and power tools needed in the boatbuilding business.

Six weeks after that, with "patience and relaxation," John was using them all as routinely and efficiently as he had before his blackout. "With the proper respect, of course," he grins, gingerly switching on the sinister saw.

The burly Scandinavian had accomplished the whole remarkable project with some state aid and personal loans, more than matched by his dogged determination, in less than a year.

IN 1968, THREE years after beginning his "crusade in courage," John D. Omundson began to attract more than local attention. He was the subject of a feature story, first in the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine, then in other publications of the region, and finally in the national press.

Now, another four years later, the blind helmsman has ridden out countless financial and psychological storms, frustrations and temporary failures. Most of his original debts have been paid off. And the boatworks is now not only paying its own overhead, but in the past four months has shown, for the first time, a financial profit.

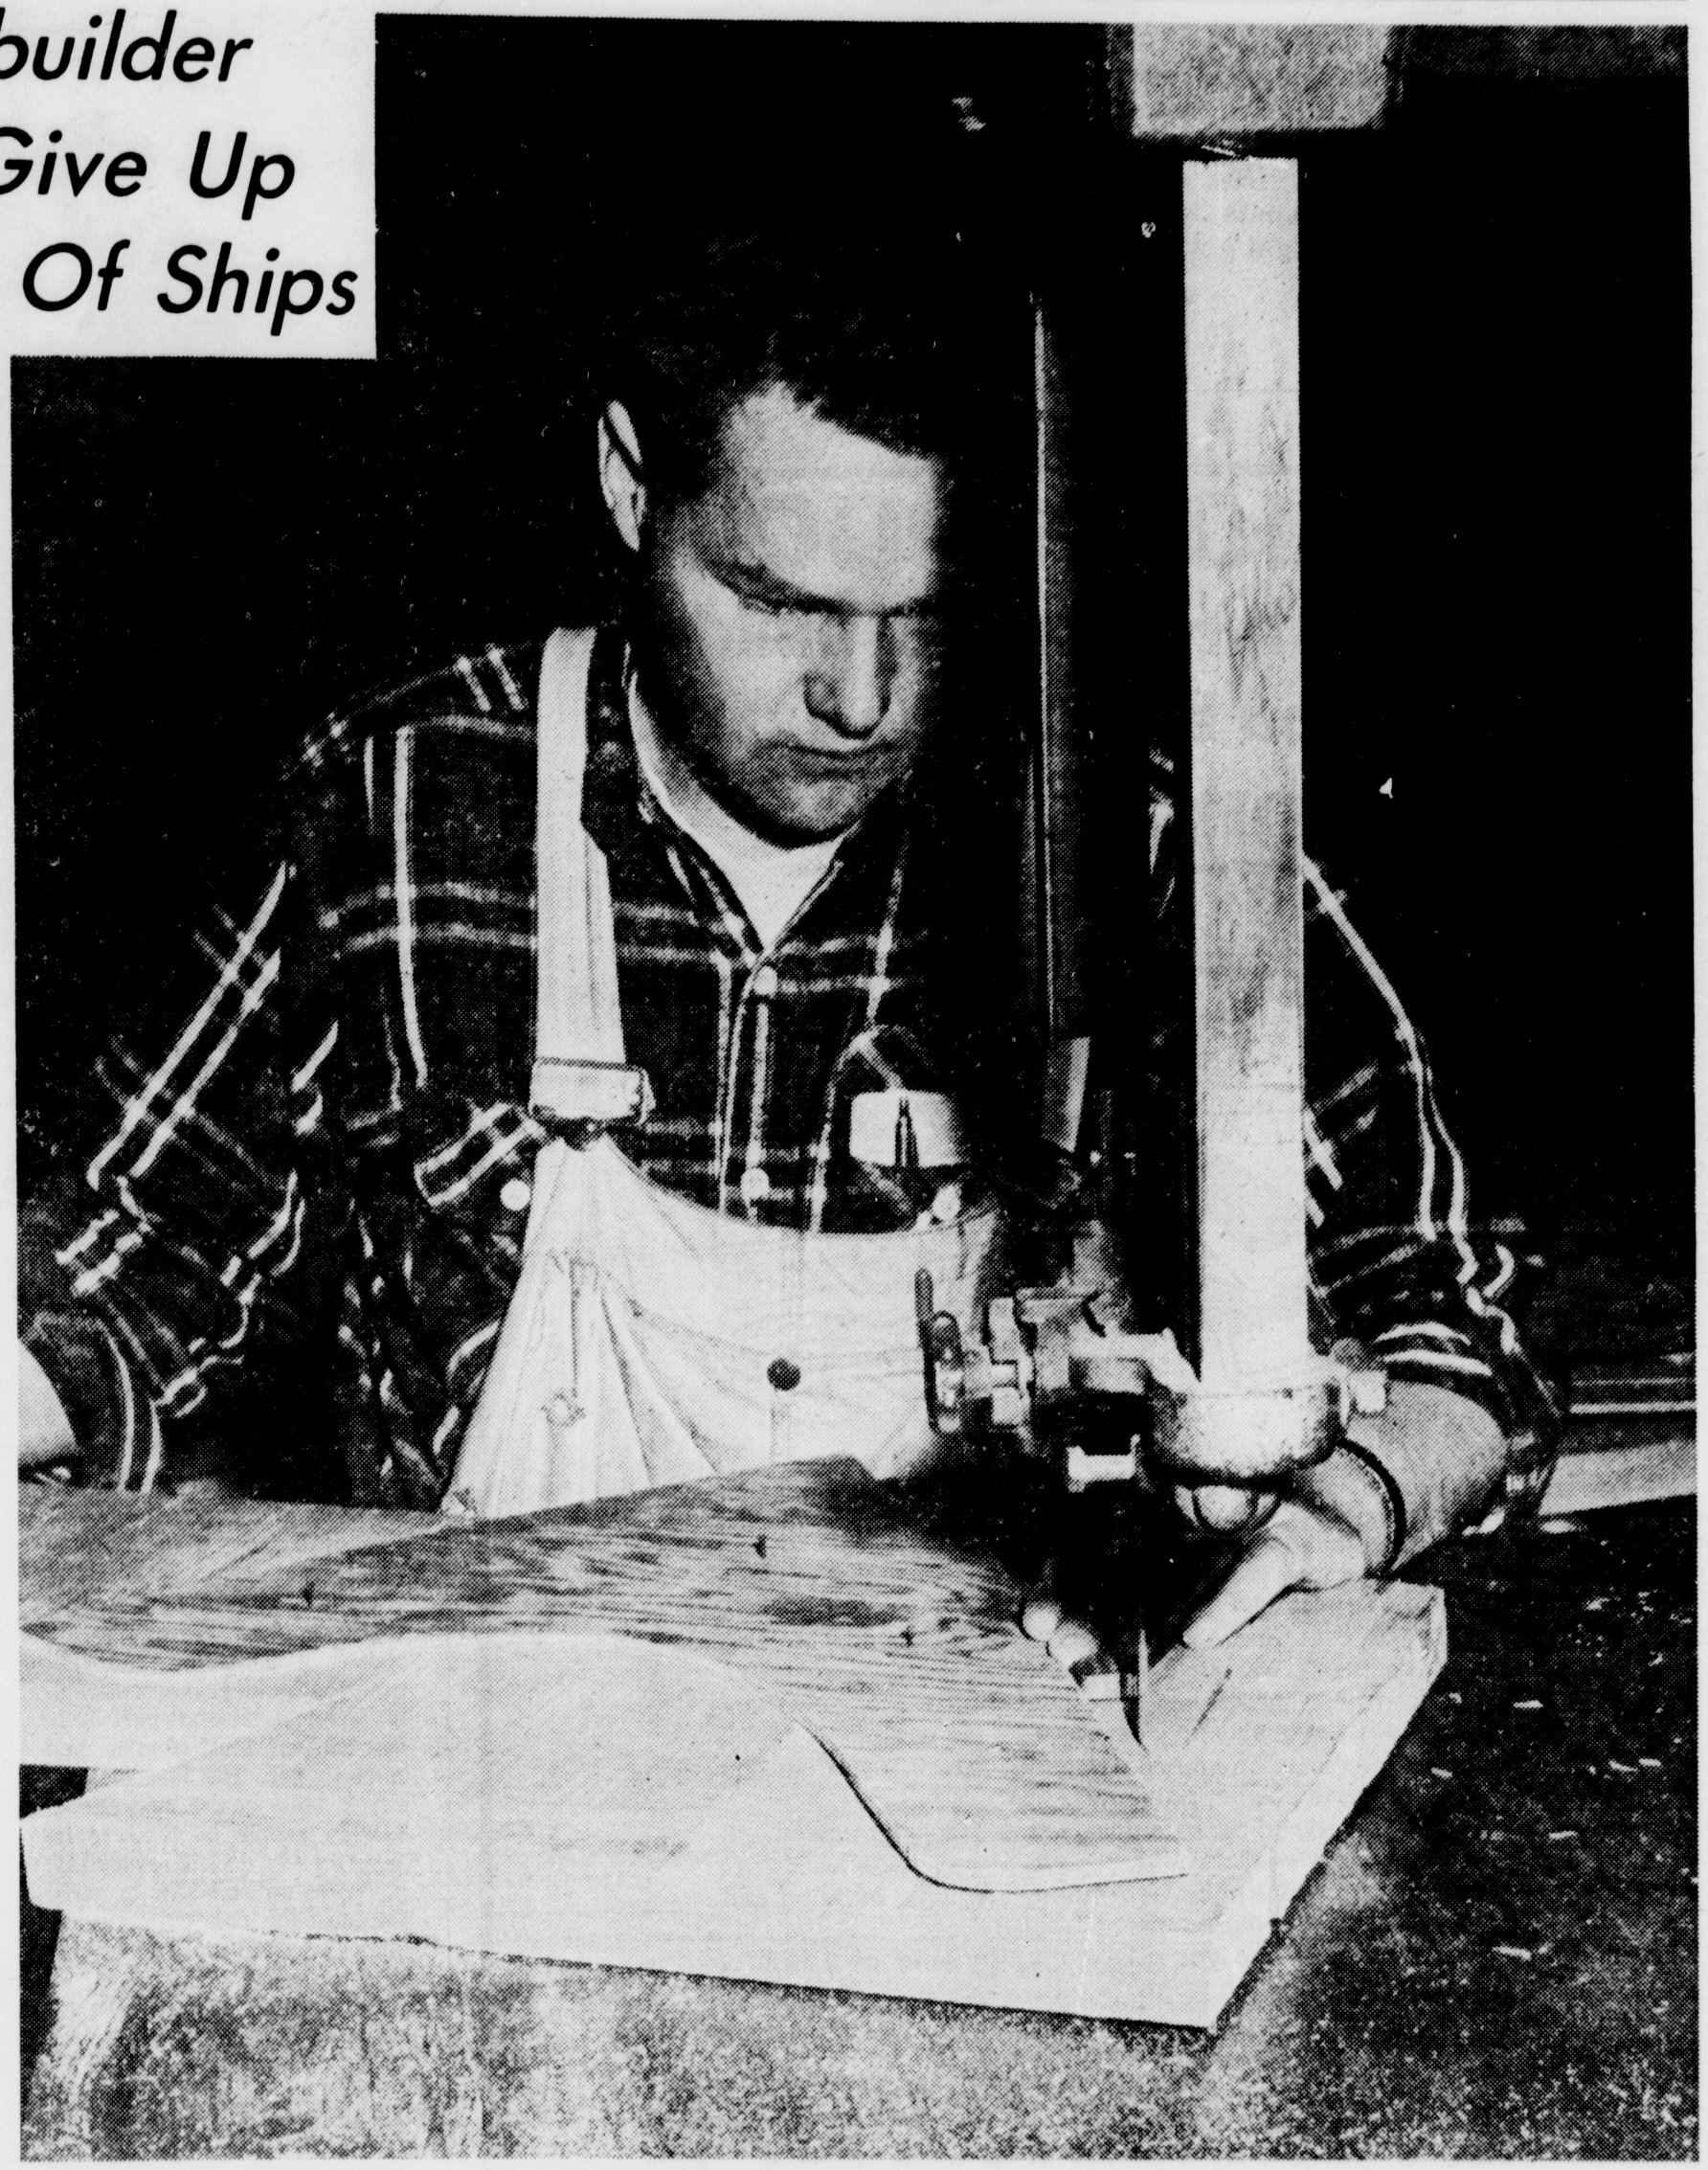

Anybody with two good eyes can see that it was not easy. But John couldn't have done it any other way except the hard way.

LATELY, TO keep from getting rusty and self-satisfied, John has started his own school for shipbuitding and lofting, which he loves. Lofting entails laying out full-scale plans for a vessel in a large room.

"This is the only way to construct a perfect ship of any kind," says the master shipbuilder.

Don't forget I could see the biggest part of my life, and my memorial picture serves me well." (Photo by Philip J. Planert)

OPENING UP his boatworks business in a former garage for a day's work, John D. Omundson will not use his white cane again until he walks to his Point Reyes Station home at the end of the day.

JOHN D. OMUNDSON

He Substitutes Sensitivity For Sight

Reyes Station boatworks hums and saws from 9 to 5, sometimes later.

John by nature is a gentle, softly spoken man, and by choice, a dedicated and full-time boatbuilder. Unintentionally, John is also a part time hair-raiser, heart-stopper and spine-tingler. The last man on earth you would suspect of scaring people to death, John nevertheless does it everytime he "revs up" his saw to make the most intricate cuts, curves, angled scarves and reverse bevels.

Seasoned seadogs wince right along with horrified newcomers to the scene.

BUT FOR JOHN the perfectionist, there is no other way. Every wooden part the blind man needs in building or repairing his boats, blueprint to finish, he hand makes from choicest teak, fir, cedar or mahogany. And no one gets used to seeing him feed great slabs of raw wood to the skirling saw, his hands in the blade. Everyone is speechless. Some close their eyes and quit breathing until they hear him snap off the power.

John, like most blind people, has developed an acute and uncanny sense of hearing and a sensitivity to the emotions of others. It is almost like second sight, and, no showoff, he is quick to reassure his concerned audience.

"Don't worry. It looks scarier than it is. Don't forget, either, that I could see the biggest part of my life, and my memory pictures serve me well."

JOHN WAS BORN in Portland, Ore., one of two sons of the late Sarah Elizabeth (Beth) and John Omundson. When young John was 3, the Omundsons moved to the state's shipbuilding center, Astoria, and he grew up there loving the seas and the ships that sail them — not unusual for a descendent of Vikings. Before he was out of his teens, John became an apprentice boatbuilder with the Joseph M. Dyer Co. in the Columbia River yards. It was the same place where his father has been recognized for years as a skilled shipwright who had set an outstanding record in the construction of minesweepers in World War II.

In nearly a quarter century of boatbuilding, the Point Reyes craftsman has worked at everything from salvage to lavout.

His father helped John build the E.H. Carruther's famed Ebb-tide. John later teamed with another boatbuilder on the major portion of the Patronilla of Portland. He also worked in the pleasure boatyards of Seattle and helped build the ocean-going yacht, Chrysopyle, in Sausalito.

John's last sighted building venture was completing the elegant sloop, Galatea, with a fellow craftsman.

JOHN SAYS humbly: "God has always provided for all of my needs and most of my wants. Without faith in Him, and the strict discipline and comprehensive training from my father as a boy, I would not have had the strength to stay in the boatbuilding game, where good eyesight is considered essential."

AT UPPER LEFT, John Omundson works upon his chief labor of love, a self-designed bustle stern, open, sportsfishing boat that he started building in 1968, and which he takes up from time to time between other jobs and projects. At right, on one of those projects, a Great Pelican, a class designed by Marin's Capt. Bill Short, shipwright Omundson does some close drilling in the marine plywood.

In his seven sightless years, John has built two 12-foot San Francisco (Standard) Pelicans and two Great Pelicans, heftier, 16-foot offspring of the sassy standard. The sturdy "Pelies" are all marine plywood, sailing dory-sampans with standing lug rigs, designed in 1959 by William H. Short to take the roughest sailing San Francisco Bay can blow up, which is plenty. Short is a veteran tug boat captain, boat designer and longtime friend and admirer of John Omundson.

Formerly a resident of Larkspur, Captain Short now lives in Inverness.

JOHN BEGAN building his first Great Pelican in 1969 for George Richardson, an insurance company executive in Phoenix, Ariz. They had never met, and the boat was completed after, almost daily long distance telephone calls between Phoenix and Point Reyes Station. When Richardson arrived at the boat works in mid-1970 to pick up his finished Pelican, he saw for the first time that the perfectionist shipwright was a blind man.

To say Richardson was astounded is the understatement of the year. Especially when he found his Great Pelican was a perfectly-done "bird."

Richardson has sailed it ever since on the many man-made lakes in Arizona, and in the testing waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

ON JUNE 19, 1972, John was surprised, but pleased, when Richardson showed up at the hulking boat shop to tell John personally how his creation had been sorely tried, and proven first-rate, in a recent hurricane off the California coast. The Great Pelican was battered for 18 relentless hours in heavy seas and winds clocked at 82 miles an hour. Richardson said John's hand-made boat rode out the punishing storm with only minor damage and with all aboard safe.

Mr. and Mrs. Layne Van Allen of San Jose have now commissioned John to construct his third 3reat Pelican in darkness. He has a Sept. 1 deadline to meet, and though it does take him longer to build a boat blindly, he will make it with help from son, Dale, his one apprentice and part-time assistant.

However, John's perseverence stands out strongest in the most ambitious construction project of his life ... an in-progress 24-foot open sport-fishing boat which has a double-end, modified bustle stern. John did not design nor start building this Alaska cedarwood masterpiece until late 1968 ... three years after going blind.

THE SPORTFISHERMAN is all hand-fitted, heavy construction and joinery. John faithfully works toward her completion between boatbuilding and boat repair jobs for other people, and he proudly guarantees "her hull will last for 50 years, no strain."

Purpose of the bustle stern is to keep her from squatting when the 10-horsepower, two-stroke Atlantic motor goes on. John's big-water baby resembles a Monterey Fisherman from the water line up, and will haul six in comfort, eight to 10 knots an hour. Needless to add, she is already sold.

But there is one job John won't tackle now, that he used to do routinely — the painting of his finished ship. He could probably do an acceptable job, sight unseen. But acceptable is not good enough for John. "I can't risk a splotchy paint job after all that work."

THE LIVES OF every man, woman and child in Point Reyes Station is touched, and often bettered, by the direct, hard-working blind man in their midst. People of all ages drift in and out of his shop all day long, to share John's non-stop, scalding coffee and punnish good humor.

"The hurrier I go, the behinder I get," he chuckles, scaling the bustle stern like a fly.

They say: "It is a real miracle how John (sees) to go on building his boats by hand and by heart. It makes life easier for all of us to know he can make his way with such strong faith in God and in himself.

The Point Reyes boatbuilder has never needed a guide dog or much human help, and rarely uses his Braille or the white cane of the blind, except to travel afoot to and from his modest home and his boat shop.

ALONG WITH boundless encouragement, faith and practical help from Doris, daughter Katie, now 18, and son Dale, 17, all often serve as John's "eyes."

Doris works as chief naturalist at the Muir Woods National Monument.

"I would be pleased if Dale follows our family tradition and becomes a boatbuilder," John says. "However, he must choose for himself when the time comes."

Katie and Dale attend Trinity Western College in Langley, B.C., and Dale is spending this summer working with his father at Point Reyes.

While John talks, he never stops working. His super-sensitive hands probe easily and with assurance through the wall to wall clutter of boat fittings, piles of lumber, ship hulls, nails, bolts, hammers and flotsom and jetsam blown in from the four corners of the world. John lets it lay where it falls forever, a perilous obstacle course for the sighted, but a blind blessing for John. The disarray is his guide line and gives him security.

JUST AS THEY did before the man of their house lost his vision, the close-knit Omundson family makes two round trips, about 100 miles, from Point Reyes Station to San Rafael every Sunday. They attend both morning and evening services at the Evangelical Free Church, where John teaches the adult Bible class, and where for the past seven years has served as a member of the executive board and as an elder.

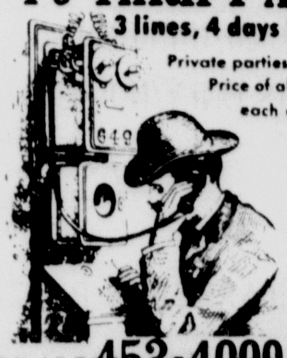

Pastor Samuel Walberg knew John before the shipwright lost his eyesight. He says: "John is my right hand man. His example and living faith in God is a tremendous force in maintaining the spiritual tone of our church for the 125 families that it serves."

Often, after morning services, the Omundsons hike to the redwoods for a picnic lunch, or range along the seashore. No matter. John always manages to wind up at the waterfront where he can hear seagulls keening and wheeling in the sky and weekend boats straining their leashes at the pier.

The boss of the world's rarest boatworks is like the proverbial postman who takes a walk on his day off. John, blindly but straightway, goes down to the sea and ships, even on Sunday.

Volunteer Firemen Join The Celebration

Department Has Played Major Role In 75-Year History Of Belvedere City

By DON KEOWN

Next Saturday, with an historical parade followed by a community festivities, the City of Belvedere climaxes a six-month celebration of its Diamond Jubilee anniversary.

Front and center during the observance, and through 54 years of the city's 75-year history, have been Belvedere's active and colorful volunteer firemen.

A holdover from the days when in all but the largest cities of America, the fire alarms were answered by storekeeper and clerk, barber and blacksmith, doctor and lawyer, the Belvedere Volunteer Fire Department remains a 100 per cent unpaid, civilian force that serves not only as the city's defense force against fires, but also plays a leading civic and social role in Belvedere community life.

The Belvedere volunteers trace their history back to 1918 and 13 public-spirited citizens, most of them members of the Corinthian Yacht Club and the Pacific Motorboat Club.

THE MEN, noting that they had been turning out informally but regularly in response to fire calls, decided formal organization would contribute to their efficiency.

Taking the lead in the formation of the volunteer department was the late Dan McLean, who was to become its first chief and to serve in that capacity until 1943.

During the World War II years, Ray Weeks Jr. and Larry Coleman each served one-year terms as fire chief. Since 1945 L. T. (Bunk) Mersereau has been the chief.

IN THE EARLIEST years hand-pulled horse carts were scattered around Belvedere and the Tiburon Peninsula for fire-fighting purposes. In Belvedere proper, there was one cart on the "flats," another on the hill, both kept in readiness for instant action. Standpipes were strategicallylocated around the island and peninsula to supply the needed water. And in a shed near each standpipe were kept a few lengths of hose.

Bunk Mersereau — "My dad," he says, "gave me the nickname the day I was born. He wanted a girl, and when he found out he had a boy, he said 'this is the bunk!'" — remembers that after moving to Belvedere in 1920, he helped, as a lad, to pull hose for the volunteer firemen.

He recalls, too, the big 100,000-gallon water tank that stood on Wilson's Lot atop the hill as the department's reserve water supply.

A MODEL T Ford hose truck became the young department's first motorized equipment in the early 1920s, and in 1929 it was joined by a Chevrolet truck to which, in the early 1930s, a GMC rig was added. The last, according to Erwin Farley, who has researched the department's history, became the volunteers' "first real fire engine" when pumping equipment was added to it in 1940.

The first fire alarm for Belvedere was a hand-rung bell, set up at 401 Golden Gate Ave., that was also tolled daily at 6:30 a.m. to awaken commuters so they could catch the early ferryboat to San Francisco.

The old bell, which also served at various times at the Belvedere School and the Belvedere Presbyterian Church, is now located in the tower next to Old St. Hilary's Museum in Tiburon.

A MODERN siren operates now from the Belvedere City Corporation Yard, and it is given a test sounding daily at 4:30 p.m.

Bunk Mersereau joined the department formally in 1932.

"A Belvedere man became eligible for membership at age 18," he says. "But I was working for U.S. Rubber Co., and they were moving me around a great deal. Just as soon as I settled down, I joined the department."

He describes Chief Dan McLean as "a fine person and a big, impressive man, six feet one or two inches tall and well-proportioned, who took his fire-fighting responsibilities very seriously. He was always on the look for some means of improving the department."

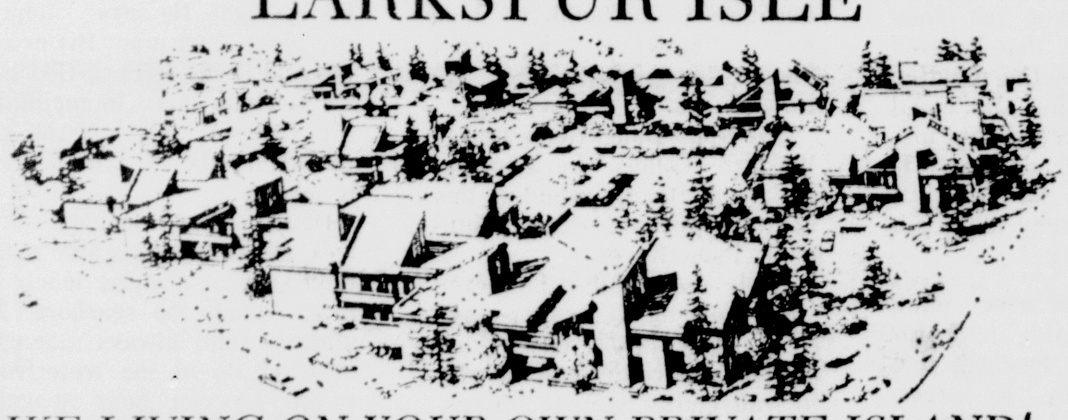

McLEAN WAS a contractor who had come to Marin in 1892 and joined his brother Neil (Belvedere's first town marshal) in building some of San Francisco's largest projects including 27 buildings at Fort Winfield Scott. Later, on his own, Dan McLean built some of Belvedere's and Tiburon's finest homes, as well as Tiburon business buildings.

councilman, a Marin Municipal Water District director, a Marin Mosquito Abatement District board chairman, and Belvedere's building inspector in which capacity he demonstrated a strong interest in the preservation of Belvedere's natural beauty and its historic edifices.

Belvedere Volunteer Fire Department service became a tradition with the McLean family. The first chief's son, William A. (Sandy) McLean, served under his father as assistant chief, and grandsons were also for a time active with the firemen.

MERSEREAU notes that the tradition of service with the department has been passed down from generation to generation in several Belvedere families.

Chief Mersereau says that through the years more than 100 men have served in the Belvedere Volunteer Fire Department. It was a department that until 1941 when the Tiburon Volunteer Fire Department was created, responded to fires throughout most of the Tiburon Peninsula area. Today it functions under a reciprocal assistance agreement with the Tiburon firemen, by which each department aids the other in time of emergency.

Today's Belvedere Fire Department roster, according to its chief, stands 25 volunteers strong, augmented by the Belvedere City Public Works Department crew of four men.

NO FIREMAN receives pay for fire-fighting or training. But the City of Belvedere carries accidents, disability and life insurance of the volunteers, uniforms and equips them, pays the salary of a training officer, and also pays the wages of two young students who sleep nights at the fire station and thus man its telephone.

There are also emergency telephone lines to the Cove Nursery (whose George Coleman is Mersereau's deputy or assistant chief), to the city hall, and to the home of Capt. Dave Imrie. From all these points, as well as from the firehouse, the alarm siren can be sounded.

Mersereau estimates that the first truck is manned and rolling from the firehouse "in every case in less than three minutes after the first call comes in — and generally a good quicker than that."

THE DEPARTMENT has no specialists. Every member is a potential engine driver and a jack-of-all-trades.

"And we keep our gear always close at hand and ready," Mersereau says. "If the call comes in while we are entertaining guests at dinner — too bad for the dinner. The fire call comes first."

There is always an adequate force of volunteers available when the siren sounds in the evening, during the night or on the weekends. In the daytime many of the volunteers are commuters who work outside the community. But, explains Mersereau, his department has an always-available nucleus of manpower consisting of the four city public works men, three men from the Belvedere Land Co. office, two or three from the San Francisco Yacht Club, "and the others who happen to be around."

"THERE HAS never been an occasion in the department's history when an insufficient number of men responded to a

Bad fires are rare in Belvedere, the chief notes thankfully.

"That is because our people generally have a large investmentin their property, and that tends to make them fire-conscious," he explains.

Mersereau can remember only three major fires in the last 25 years — "one of the worst of these was the destruction of the big Hoppe home four or five years ago."

FAST ACTION by his department, the chief claims, has prevented many another threatening blaze from exploding into a major conflagration. This despite the steep terrain and thick woods in which the firemen sometimes must function.

As in Dan McLean's day, the Belvedere volunteers take their fire-fighting very seriously, says Mersereau. There are evening training sessions with good turnouts every other Wednesday at the firehouse. Gaylord Bonfield, former training officer for the City of San Rafael and Marinwood's fire chief, is the training officer.

Mersereau or other experienced members of the department conduct daytime training sessions for the city employees.

BUT THE department also has its social side as well, Mersereau notes, "and it is one of the organizations that helps to knit Belvedere into a cohesive community in spite of the fact that so many of us are commuters who go our own ways during the daylight hours."

The volunteers have their traditions, including the annual fireman's ball, a beer bust, a root beer bust during Fire Prevention Week for the community's children, a wives' dinner at which spouses of the firemen are guests of their husbands, and a Christmas party for the youngsters. All these are annual events.

In addition, says Bunk Mersereau, "we might get together for an informal feed anytime a member comes back from a successful deer or duck hunting trip."

"We've got a fine group of men," the chief asserts.

AGES RANGE from 18 to 65. There are doctors, lawyers, engineers, construction men,

THE COMRADESHIP and social aspects of membership in the Belvedere Volunteer Fire Department and its sponsoring association, while secondary to the fire-fighting and fire-protection functions, have always been important to the men on the roster. Mersereau, Erein Farley, Kenneth Frost, Harlin Peterson (standing) and Charles Yates wielding a playful gavel.

THE SOCIAL LIFE of the fire station and friendships within the fire department is still important to the Belvedere volunteers today. Around the table and engaged in a domino game are Capt. Jim Rey, Jim Coleman, Jim Stokes and Mike Batlan. Peter Coleman is at the dartboard. And in conference to the right are Erwin Farley and Chief L. T. (Bunk) Mersereau.

"The tradesmen are especially valuable to us," notes Mersereau. "They give us a lot of skills that are absolutely vital in fire-fighting."

Their rolling stock today consists of two triple combination pumpers (1947 and 1955 models), a surplus military jeep acquired in 1958, a pickup truck donated by the late Richard Dakin in 1960, and a 1965 International rescue truck with emergency equipment.

All the vehicles are radio-equipped, so that they can maintain contact with the radio room at headquarters and with each other.

BELVEDERE'S first firehouse was located on Beach Road near what is now Peninsula Road. It became the Belvedere Sailing Society's first boathouse, when the fire department moved to its present location at 19 Community Road in 1950, and then was used by the Allen family for storage purposes for a time until it was demolished in 1966 to make way for the Belvedere Land Co.'s Barn Road Apartments.

The new fire department headquarters consisted of the Community Hall, originally built in 1896 as a Presbyterian church at Bayview and Laurel, that was placed on wheels and rolled down Laurel Avenue to its present location on San Rafael Avenue where it was extensively remodeled. Lower level space fronting on Community Road was assigned to the fire department, and the structure has been expanded to provide additional space for the firemen as well as for the other city offices located there.

Along with shelter for the trucks and radio control headquarters, the fire station provides space for a workshop, an office, a kitchen, a bunk room, and a meeting room.

CHIEF MERSEREAU is proud that Belvedere's fire protection defenses has earned it a number six rating from the Pacific Fire Rating Board.

"That's pretty good for a volunteer department," he claims.

Further proof of the efficiency of his department, he feels, is the fact that the establishment of a paid corps of firefighters has never been a seriously advanced suggestion in Belvedere.

In his 40 years with the department, Bunk Mersereau has acquired a lot of memories — such as the time when the volunteers responded in 1940 to a fire on the Little Reed Ranch near the present Del Mar School — and Dan McLean's hard-pressed men ran out of water. Milk from five-gallon cans was poured into the booster tank on the fire engine — and that liquid was used to extinguish the flames.

ALONG WITH fires in buildings, boats, automobiles, grass and trees, the volunteers have served their community and the area in times of emergencies — of flood; tidal wave alerts; major automobile, boating and construction accidents; power failures; storms, and illnesses.

The firemen's knowledge of first aid and the use of resuscitator equipment has been credited many times with the saving of lives in the community.

Working under the four chiefs the department has known has been a succession of equally hardworking and dedicated assistant or deputy chiefs, beginning with Sandy McLean and including Francis Hilton, Ted Goldbeck, George Hutchins, Russell Schneider, R.J. Milzner and George Coleman.

LIAISON WITH the city is maintained through a city council-appointed fire commissioner, of whom there has been 13 to date. One of the longest tenures was served by a woman, Councilman Ida Scott. John Moore is the current council-appointed commissioner.

The Belvedere Volunteer Firemen's Assn. serves as the social wing of the firemen. Its present officers are David Imrie, president; Robert Holm, vice president; John Stokes, secretary, and Roy Ashley, treasurer.

Bunk Mersereau admits that when he first became chief of Belvedere's firemen, "I was pretty much drafted." Now a salesman of fire-fighting and fire-safety equipment by profession, Mersereau also admits that it has become less difficult for his colleagues to draft him as their chief as the years go by.

FIRE CHIEF L. T. (Bunk) Mersereau of the Belvedere volunteer firemen says he can remember only three major fires in the last 25 years in fire-conscious Belvedere. One of these is pictured above, a 1950 conflagration that destroyed a rambling three-story residence on Corinthian Island, Havenscourt, belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Taylor. Property loss was estimated at $70,000.

"THEY ARE A nice group of fellows to work with," he says. "I guess I'll stay around as chief as long as they want me."

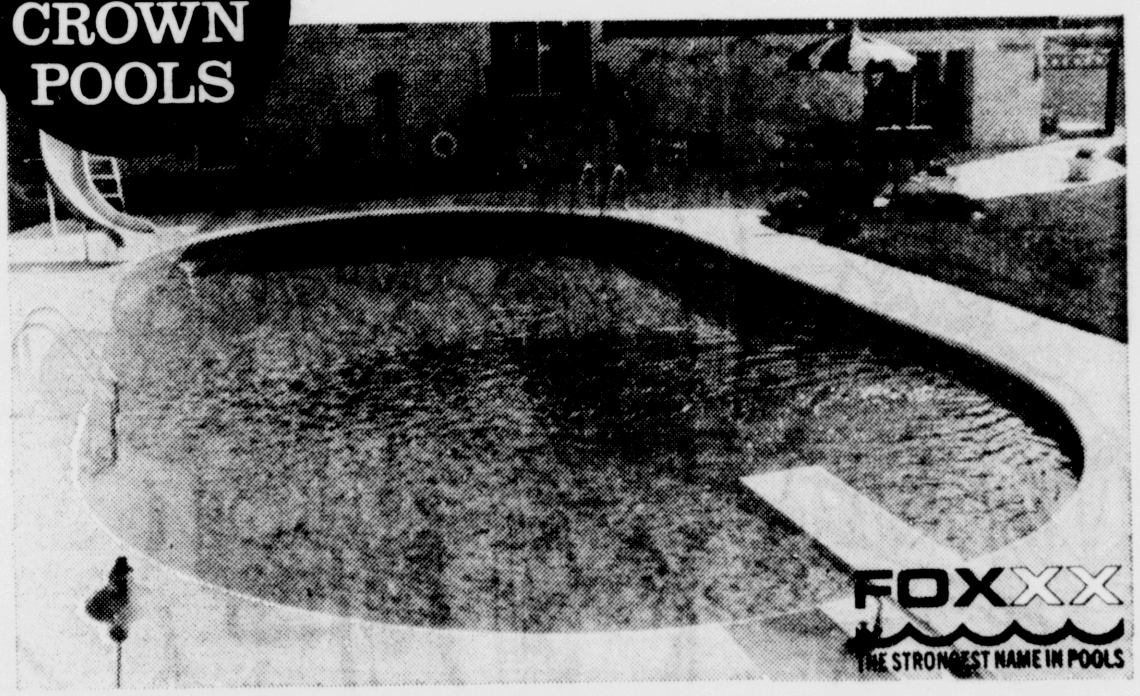

His fellow firemen say Mersereau's expert knowledge of fire equipment and its use make him invaluable in his non-paid position as their leader. He is, himself, a fully qualified training officer.

With this background of 54 years as a force for public safety and for civic betterment in their community, Belvedere's volunteer firemen will participate proudly with their 1930-vintage truck in next Saturday's 10:30 a.m. parade and the events later in the day — a picnic supper, music and dancing — as one of California's most beautiful and most distinctive municipalities celebrates its 75th birthday.

The Colorful Dress Of The Southwest's Spanish-Mexican Era

Marin writer-illustrator Glen Dines says his newest book, "Sun, Sand and Steel," is intended principally for the junior high school and high school age groups.

But he won't be displeased or surprised if it also proves to be a popular and useful reference work with adults.

"Sun, Sand and Steel," published by Putnam, priced at $4.29, is a serious, well-researched study of the costumes, the weapons, the tools and the riding equipment of the Mexican and Spanish peoples who were the first whites to settle the American Southwest.

And behind each and every page of art, and the informative captions, Dines says, is much exhaustive research, emphasizing contemporary sources of the period from Francisco Vasquez de Coronado's explorations in the mid-16th Century to California statehood.

Because of this care for authenticity, the artist-author hopes and expects his book to be useful to little theater groups, producers of historic pageants and parades, illustrators and others in search of trustworthy information on the dress and implements of the Californios and other early-day originators of the still-felt Spanish-Mexican culture of the American Southwest.

Dines says that his drawings and descriptions focus upon not the unusual and fancier costuming which these people donned only infrequently for special occasions, but upon their day-to-day working and living dress — colorful though that was.

"In that respect," he says, "I think the book fills a void in the available historical record of these people and their era."

Behind his work, he adds, is extensive research that included trips to the important museums of the Southwest, plus hours spent in closer-to-home sources such as the Bancroft Library.

When Dines began a correspondence with the Thomas Gilcrease Institute of American History and Art in Tulsa, Okla., he was rewarded with a number of photographic copies of watercolors by Mexican artists of the period. The book, "Military, Civilian and Religious Costumes of Mexico," published in 1828 in both Spanish and French and the work of an Italian artist who traveled inMexico, was another bonanza. Dines found it in the Bancroft Library.

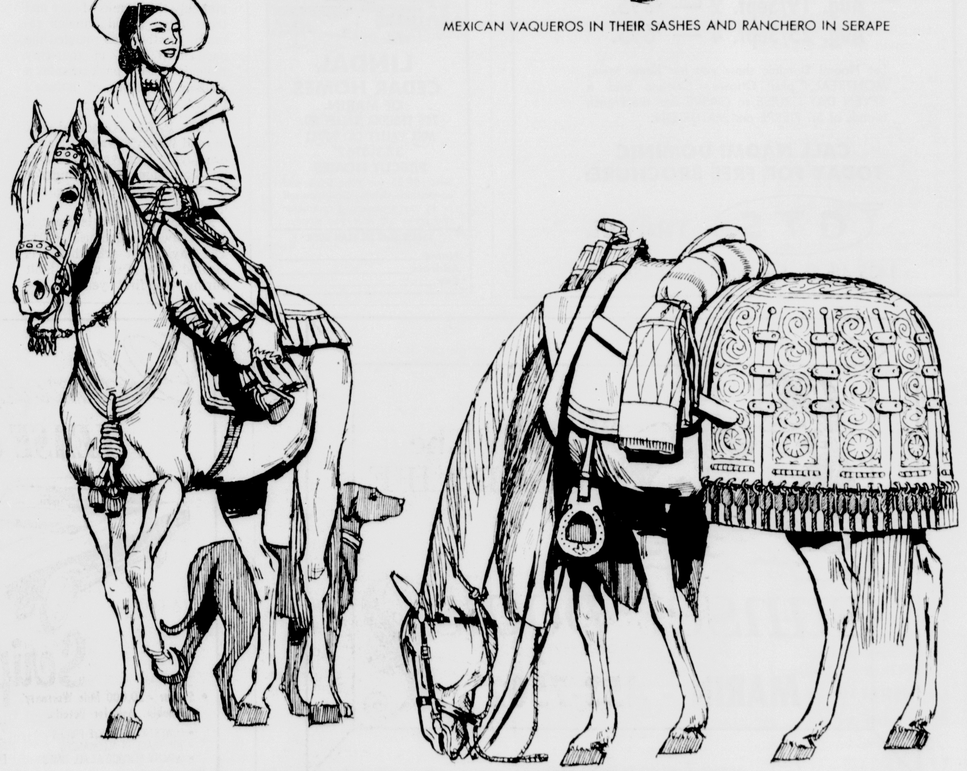

The many paintings and drawings scrutinized for details included the famous work of Jose Cardero.

Many of these figures and their dress, Fairfax resident Dines notes, were typical of the inhabitants of our own Marin County during its Spanish and Mexican periods. This is true of the characters in the four groups reproduced on these pages from Dines' original illustrations for his book, except for the dragoon.

Dines, a Marin resident now for nearly 20 years, has been long interested in regional history. His previous books have included "Kit Carson's Black Deed and Other True Stores from Marin's Lively Past," "Overland Stage" and "Golden Cities, Golden Ships," the last about the Spanish explorers of California.

Anchorage Cherishes Its History

Alaska's Largest City Is The Site Of Many Museums

Anchorage, Alaska, swinging and modern, is one of the nation's youngest major cities.

It was founded in 1915 as a tent and log cabin supply base for a proposed government railroad, now the 471-mile Alaska Railroad.

It's comparative youth, however, has not kept Anchorage and Anchorageites from appreciating its history, and its museums contain some of the finest art and artifacts to be found anywhere in the West.

THERE IS the Anchorage Historical and Fine Arts Museum, located at 121 West Seventh Ave., founded as a result of the Alaska Centennial Celebration of 1967. The museum has a permanent collection of more than 2,000 paintings and artifacts including works by Sydney Laurence and Eustace Ziegler, two of Alaska's most famous artists.

The museum also offers changing exhibits of various collections and art objects. There is no charge.

Another attraction is the Jonas Brothers Wildlife Museum containing a basement of full-size mounts and other representations of mostof the major big game animals in the state. It is located at the corner of Fifth and C streets. There is no admission charge.

HERITAGE Library, located at the corner of Fifth and E streets, is a must for visitors interested in the history of Alaska. Heritage contains the Bank of Alaska's large collection of nearly 1,000 books, maps, gold rush newspapers, paintings, artifacts, films and recordings of Alaska's past. The museum is open from 2 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Alaska Transportation Museum is another benefit from the Alaska Centennial. The museum is located at the intersection of Spenard and International Airport roads, near the Lake Hood Seaplane Base. The museum houses restored early-day aircraft, antique cars, aircraft engines, models of airplanes, photographs of airplanes, an old rail bus and railroad cars.

Many of the restored aircraft were salvaged from sites of crash landings Early pilots supplied tips on the crash sites.

THE MUSEUM is open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., but generally closed from noon to 1 p.m. Sunday hours are 1 to 5:30 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Also of interest is Earthquake Park. This is a 135-acre memorial to the earthquake of 1964 and was once one of the city's better residential areas. During the earthquake huge chunks of a bluff above Cook Inlet broke loose and tumbled into or toward the water. Whole blocks of houses were carried away. Other were perched at odd angles atop or between huge chunks of clay.

The houses were removed and only the chunks of clay and trees tilted at odd angles remain. Weather has rounded the once-sharp lines of the clay mounds, but the park remains a striking example of nature's power.

THE PARK is located just beyond Wendy's Way off Northern Lights Boulevard. There is no admission, and a marker describes the area and earthquake.

Another point of interest is Ben Crawford Memorial Park. The city's first schoolhouse is located here. Two cabins built during the first year of the city's existence share the site in a forested setting.

The park is located at Third and Eagle streets, about nine blocks from the center of the downtown area, and is open from 1 to 4 p.m. daily.

Anchorage was born on the shores of Ship Creek and tents and cabins were built at the creek's mouth in 1915, when work on the railroad started.

The site of the tent city was known as Ship Creek Landing. The same year citizens voted to change the name Ship Creek to the official one of Anchorage.

The original townsite was 1,500 acres and when incorporated in 1920 the nose count was 1,865 persons. Today Anchorage bosts of a population of some 50,000 persons.

THE ANCHORAGE Historical and Fine Arts Museum houses some of Alaska's finest art treasures, collected over the years by the Cook Inlet Historical Society. It is one of several museums in the city and through the state. Almost all are free to the public, and an essential part of any visit to the state.

The Asians Tire Of Long-Haired Visitors

By HENRY HAYWARD

Before setting off on a visit to an Asian country nowadays, it pays to check two items — your visas and your hair.

Fed up with antics of some long-haired hippie visitors from Europe, America and Australia, an increasing number of Oriental nations have introduced restrictions on the length of male locks.

And at lease one country, Pakistan, which before the Indo-Pakistan war was happy to have American visitors arrive for stays of up to 21 days without a visa, has been rigidly enforcing visa requirements for those with United States passports.

THE LONG-HAIR ban stems from the desire of such nations as Thailand, Taiwan, Indonesia and Singapore to protect their own impressionable youngsters from the impact of what sometimes accompanies long locks and untidy clothing — drugs and loose morals.

Taiwan, where the older Nationalist Chinese have a strict sense of how the younger generation ought to behave, was probably the first openly to take a dim view of lads with shoulder-length shagginess and unkempt attire. Incoming visitors were warned at the airport that this type of dress would not be tolerated.

Singapore, under the firm hand of Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, was not far behind in cracking down on what were termed "unwanted manifestations of Western subculture." In the mind of the Singapore government, there is a clear connection between long hair and drugs.

AT LEAST AT the outset, eagle-eyed, no-nonsense inspectors at the airport scanned incoming passengers, and those deemed to have overstepped the acceptable tonsorial length were given the choice of a quick airport trim or an immediate departure.

Yet the bans have not always been rigidly enforced. In Taiwan and Singapore, youngsters with long hair have been passed without question if their hair was neat and their overall appearance satisfactory. Their chances were even better if they happened to be accompanied by non-hippie parents.

Thailand has not officially bannedexcessive male hairdos, but one Thai official did say the invitations to a Asian athletic meet should stipulate that only those visitors with well-mowed tresses would be welcome.

THAI LAND AT present is more inclined to deport hippies if they become involved in drug incidents during their stay in the country, rather than to insist on haircuts.

With members of Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn's National Executive Council setting an exmaple of military neatness, shorter hair quickly became the current Thai fashion. The word filtered down through the military to students — female was well as male — that superfluous head foliage was out of style.

In most countries, the barbering crackdown has been paralleled by new restrictions on nightlife, pornography and drug availability.

Among the latest to join the hair-conscious ranks is restive Cambodia, where President Lon Nol recently decreed short trims as obligatory for his countrymen. Cambodian soldiers, especially, are on notice to crop their sometimes individualistic hairstyles.

THE PATTERN often is that such regulations first are applied to the home folks and then to visitors, and Cambodia is likely to prove no exception.

The trouble is that some mature business men and travelers who regard themselves not only as non-hippies but as pillars of society also have developed long sideburns and modestly billowing manes. No one is quite certain if the close-crop edicts apply to them.

But this correspondent, who fancies himself one of the latter species, cannot recall a publicized instance where an older arrival was given a "cut-'em-off" ultimatum. A cold stare at the immigration desk, perhaps, but not an actual confrontation with shears.

HONG KONG has remained relatively unmoved amid the tonsorial tumult. As one of the local papers put it, "it's a case of hair today, gone tomorrow." Superlong locks have not been banned but they never caught on in Hong Kong according to top barbers. But long mutton-chip whiskers on the face and over-the-collar hair have become popular among the older generation, including some conservative business men types.

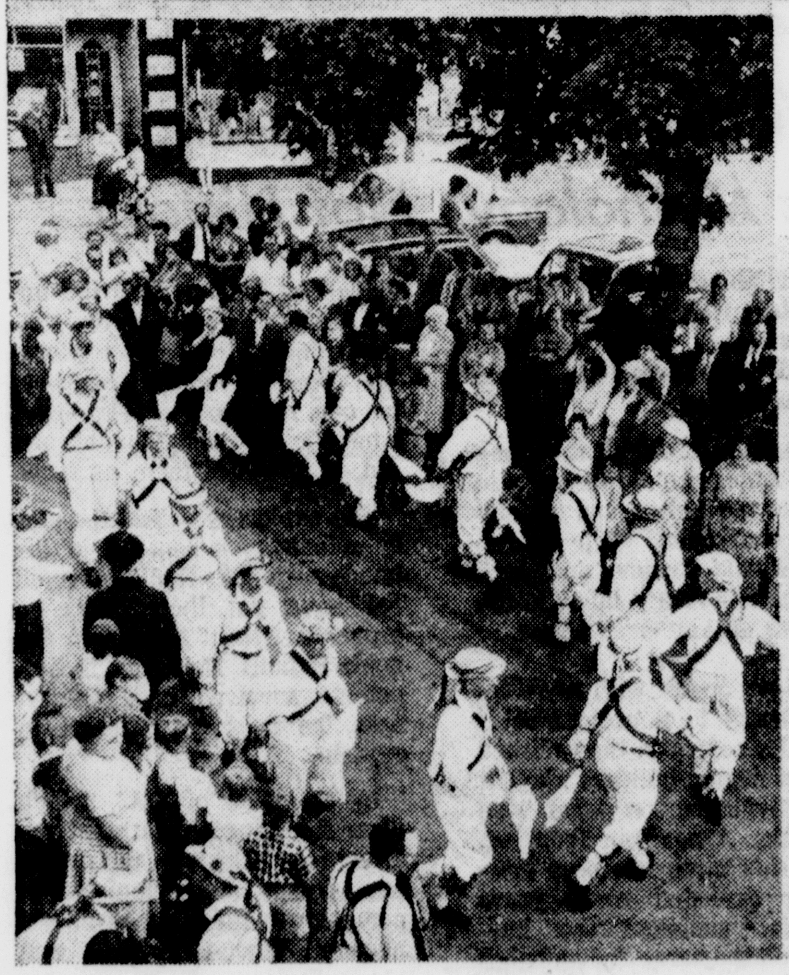

Meanwhile, the wisest rule seems to be:

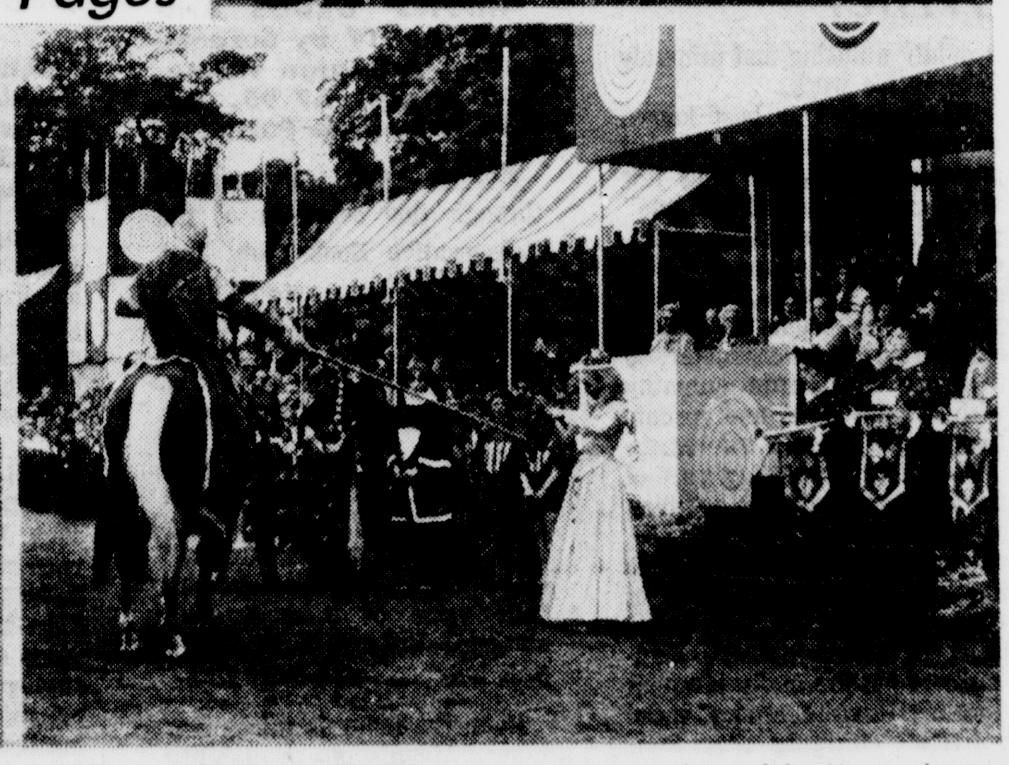

When you're all visael-up, get a hair trim, too — just in case. Then you're really ready to travel.

The Travel Pages

ONE OF THE GREAT pleasures of visiting Britain for Americans is the opportunity to witness and enjoy recreational, cultural and sports activities that are lacking in their own land. At upper left, one such visitor tries her hand at rowing a coracle, the Welsh skin boat, while two locals stay close and watchful to rescue her if she tips. At upper right, village cricketers take on some refreshments before going into another round of the national sport. At lower left, Morris dancing festivals provide a colorful spectacle. And at lower right, jousting from the days of Henry VIII is once again becoming a popular sport and included on the program for a number of festivals. If all this activity seems a bit tiring, there is always the nearby pub to which one can retire for a half pint, a game of darts or a bit of relaxing conversation with the locals.

British Columbia Salmon Derby officials at Vancouver are recommending a side trip for sportsmen to Northwest Safaris Ltd.'s float camp at Rivers Inlet, "one of the greatest fishing grounds in the world," two hours north of the B.C. metropolis by flat plane.

A SON'S RECOLLECTIONS OF FAMOUS PARENT

TOLSTOY, MY FATHER: REMINISCENCES by Ilya Tolstoy; Cowles, 274 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Harriett B. Ballinger.

"There is no strict sequence in our memories of childhood. What came early, what late — what does it matter? It happened. And that glimmering little star is now remote."

Thus does Ilya Tolstoy, third child, second son, set the tone of his reminiscences. Gathering a glimmer here and there he assembles recollections of a privileged childhood with loving, firm, creative father Leo and patient, attentive, sober mother Sonya. The fulsome household of 13 children, aunts, uncles, cousins and familiar servants; the countryside, food, furnishings; the daily and special events are described in intimate detail which conveys a sense of pleasant, unhurried country living.

Many of the people filling the Tolstoy home at this time became, at least in part, characters in Leo's literary works.

A major unhappy change occurred in Ilya's early teens. The loving, firm, creative father Leo came to believe his wealth, the church, his food, land, even his early writings to be crimes against society. Leo took as his burden to live in opposition to his own beliefs and to befuddle his family by looking with disdain on the style of life to which he had trained them.

Soon the family moved to Moscow where Sonya could better see to the education of the children without Leo's help. It was clear that for Leo the most attentive phase of his fatherhood was past and his marriage alienated.

Now except for letters hailing Ilya's courtship and marriage, his "glimmerings" of his father become less joyous. There are family pictures, letters from Leo describing his health, friends, political views. Then there are painful recollections of the confusion and suspicion, even subterfuge, dominating the last years of Leo's and Sonya's marriage. All this was climaexed by Leo's departure and, within weeks, his death in a station master's house. He never knew Sonya was waiting his call in a nearby railroad car.

Several chapters follow in which Ilya explains and tries, himself, to understand the esthetic conversion that led to the seeming cruelties in his father's later life. It is a loving and compassionate if not altogether successful effort.

Surely the book is an enrichment for students of Tolstoy — perhaps for students of life.

ILYA TOLSTOY was photographed in 1903 at Yasnaya Polyana with his famous father, Lev Nikolayevich (Leo) Tolstoy, and the picture is included in the son's recollections, "Tolstoy, My Father."

Man's Last Frontier: The Oceans' Depths

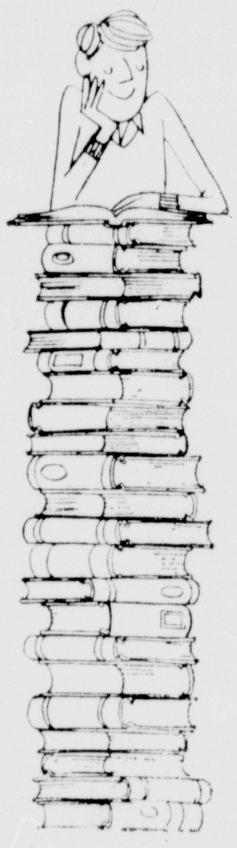

THE GREAT OCENA BUSINESS by Brenda Horsfield and Peter Bennett Stone; Cow ard, McCann and Geoghegan, 327 pages, $12.95. Reviewed by Francis M. Dozier Jr.

Outer Space having been conquered by man, at least within forseeable limits, the oceans of the world now represent the last frontier.

The science concerned with virtually aspect of the seas — oceanography — is burgeoning as never before. It will ultimately affect mankind every iota as much as space exploration and the discovery of atomic energy, contend co-authors Horsfield and Stone.

Oceanography is hardly new, having begun in the 18th Century. Why the recent rise of interest? The British authors, both involved in the mass media, point to the natural snowball effect caused by focus of attention and resources.

The book, however, in view of its rich technical content and presentation, and price, seems intended for a select readership. Traces of humor and the topicality of political and ecological implications of sea explor-ation do contribute to its palatability. But, it will serve best as a textbook, or, rather, a guide, in view of the almost daily discoveries and emergence of theories that have impact on the discipline.

An Island Paradise For Photographers

BEAUTIFUL HAWAII by Sunset editors; Lane, 223 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Hawaii, of course, is photographers' paradise, and it is hardly surprising that the island-state has spawned a multitude of picture books exploiting its magnificent scenery. It is hardly surprising either that the Menlo Park-based Sunset staff, given their past successes with this kind of thing, should have produced one of the better efforts in this crowded field.

"Beautiful Hawaii" is an impressive pictorial display of Hawaii's grandeur and variety, with the 250 pictures informatively captioned. What may surprise some is the predominance of black and white photos over color, although there are some 40 pages of the latter. But on certain aspects of the Hawaiian landscape — storm clouds over the Waianae Mountains, volcanic cinders, etc. — black and white is most effective. Some floral scenes and seascapes, however, cry for color.

Those in love with or fascinated by Hawaii will want to make room on their coffee tables or shelves for this delightful collection of photos of ranchlands, fields, meadows, beaches, jungles, mountains, villages and cities. The price through Dec. 31 is a special one, and a bargain.

A Case Of Good Agentry For A Mediocre Writer

DON'T STEP ON IT — IT MIGHT BE A WRITER by Donald MacCampbell; Sherbourne Press, 190 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This book is subtitled "Reminiscences of a Literary Agent," and it speaks better of Donald MacCampbell's abilities as an agent than it does of his talents as a writer, since it is to be surmised that he persuaded the publisher to accept what is only a mildly amusing and minutely informative work.

MacCampbell is best known as an agent in the mass market paperback field, and thus few of his clients are of the "name" variety. This leaves him handicapped in the name-dropping game. Furthermore, MacCampbell himself seems a belligerant and irritating character, so that one feels little empathy with his problems and resents his crowing over his successes.

The most interesting part of the book deals with his handling of books by political figures, particularlay U.S. senators. He has some pungent opinions of these clients. But it tells something of MacCampbell's standards or powers of discernment that his favorite among these political contacts was Sen. Thomas Dodd, whose ethics brought about a formal rebuke from his colleagues, but whom, says MacCampbell, "I have never caased to admire for his courageous stand against subversives." Yo gads!

A Case Of False Labeling: It's Mythology, Not History

THE NIAGARA by Donald Braider; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 274 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Two current fashions among some American writers are to idealize the Indian and to denigrate everything white American. Donald Braider does both in "The Niagara," latest in the "Rivers of America" series.

Braider opens with mythology —though he does not label it such. He refers to the vanished race of mound-builders who left their evidence on what was then the American frontier. Since this myth has been thoroughly exploded many years ago, the "vanished race" having been the same Indian tribes who were present when the white man arrived, the accuracy of Braider's account is placed in doubt at its opening.

The doubt is promptly reinforced by chapters relating the history of the Niagara River (which he fails to describe understandably in the entire volume) during the early exploration period. Braider concocts his own imaginative versions of what the Indians thought and did, then writes them as facts.

The explorers — and the early colonists — become in his hands such dolts that they could not have put their pants on properly without help from the noble Indians. How such incompetents survived in a wilderness, he does not attempt to explain.

In the War of 1812, which gave the Niagara its most exciting role in history, the American troops and colonists become low villains in Braider's account. The Canadians and their Indian allies are, of course, the heroes.

James Fenimore Cooper did a more realistic job of glamorizing these same Indians. But he had the honesty to label his writings as fiction.

The Hidden Cost Of Crime Is Fear

DEATH WISH by Brian Garfield; McKay, 184 pages, $4.95.

By DON KEOWN

In all our concern with crime and its costs, one of the aspects generally overlooked is the psychological toll it exacts from its victims and potential victims.

Those who have suffered personal violence or the threat of bodily harm, in particular, often become affected by a paronoiac terror.

We are becoming a society that lurks behind double-locked doors with loaded guns dangerously close at hand, suspicious of not only those who differ from us but suspicious as well of our neighbors who are not different and who even share our fears.

And sometimes to hide those fears we adopt an aggressive vigilanteism — an absessive "law and order," "pro-capital punishment" mentality upon which opportunistic, cynical politicians play for votes, and which is capable of exploding into a terrifying violence of its own.

Hatred, hysteria, suspicion, violence, self-concern crowd out all the humanitarian values, leaving the man who is determined to protect himself and his property at all costs almost as much a menance to society as the criminal.

This is the drain that is most frequently overlooked in summing up the toll that crime and our concern with it are exacting from America — particularly in our cities.

It is also the concern of Brian Garfield, author of "The Thousand-Mile War," "What of Terry Conniston?" and "Deep Cover," in his latest novel, "Death Wish."

His editor, James O'Shea Wade, writes that Grafield was in the midst of a longer novel when he felt compelled to set it aside and write "Death Wish." It tells of Paul Benjamin, certified public accountant, New York city resident by choice, liberal and civic worker by inclination, who has his life suddenly turned around by violence. In his absence, his apartment home is invaded and his wife and daughter attacked by young thugs. The wife's injuries prove fatal, while the shock drives the grown daughter to insanity. And Paul Benjamin, embittered by the failure of the police to find the culprits, begins fantasizing. It starts him down the road toward a vigilante role in which he puts aside his own timidity for a new arrogance that causes him to exact a justice of his own. It is a madness — but the most terrible thing about it is the way society accepts it as a justifiable and normal course of conduct.

Writes editor Wade: "It hit my desk without warning. When I read it I knew I had to publish it. I also knew that it was likely to encounter more than a little criticism. And it has.

"But a surprisingly large porportion of the early responses to the book have touched on its central concern — what happens when a man loses faith in what is, for lack of a better phrase, the minimum requirements of civilization. There are planty of people today who toy, either consciously or semi-consciously, with apocalyptic visions and authoritarian solutions to the deeply disturbing problem of urban violence and decay in this country.

"Death Wish, I hope, suggests what can happen when just one ordinary citizen steps off that difficult line between being neither victim nor excutioner. I hope the book will 'entertain' readers. I also hope it will cause some quiet serious after-thoughts."

"Death Wish" does that. It also causes in this reader some regret that Brian Garfield, in probing a prevocative issue, did not conduct his examination somewhat differently.

The major cost of violent crime — and its attendant hysteria — upon members of the broad public lies not in the inducement of or support of similar conduct by themselves and by the state, although that is considerable. It lies in the fear it inflicts upon society and in the disillusionment it produces, so as to dry up man's humanitarian instincts. Garfield does consider these, but in the end they are overshadowed by Paul Benjamin's resort to violence — almost forgotten.

Finally the book gives the impression of hasty writing by an author compelled to get his story out quickly and early. The urgency is understandable. But if any theme is deserving of the thorough "long novel" treatment, it is the one being taken up by Garfield in this book. He has not given himself sufficient space in which to give his thesis the study it deserves. But "Death Wish" does bring the problem to mind — terrifying. Perhaps the reader can provide his own more detailed exploration, including a little self-analysis.

How much is crime costing us in not-out-of-the-pocket expenditures? And how much of that cost is necessary? And how much self-assessed?

HELEN BRADLEY is something of an English version of America's Grandma Moses. Born in Lees in Lancashire in 1900, she had her first exhibition of her paintings on her 65th birthday. Her first work, in a distinctive primitive style and often harkening back to scenes of her girlhood, were done with a bread knife and fish slice. Since then she has had four more exhibitions including one in Los Angeles, and a 1970 London exhibit that sold out before it opened. Last year her "And Miss Carter Wore Pink," a collection of 26 of her paintings of Edwardian scenes including the two above, was published in London and it led the best-seller lists there for months. Now Holt, Rinehart and Winston has published the book in America. It's a world of parasols, ice skating on ponds, baking ovens in the kitchen, wagon rides, two-wheelers and Christmas feasts. "Better than whole volumes of social history," said the International Herald Tribune of the $6.95 book. And says Mrs. Bradley: "The Edwardian era was lovely, gay and exciting. Even the weather was kinder."

IT SEEMS we are due for a Dr. Kildare revival. From the series of Lew Ayres-Lionel Barrymore movie fame and later television exposure, Beagle Books has reprinted three of the Max Brand titles — "Young Dr. Kildare," "Dr. Kildare Takes Charge" and "Dr. Kildare's Trial" — as 95-cent paperbacks, noting on the back that the Kildare series is soon to return to television with Gary Merrill and Mark Jenkins in the leading roles.

CHARLES TUTTLE of Rutland, Vt., has published as quality $2.95 paperbacks three books of the writings of Harold S. Williams — "Shades of the Past: Indiscreet Tales of Japan," "Foreigners in Mikadoland" and "Tales of the Foreign Settlements in Japan." Much of the material consists of Williams' articles printed in the 1950s in the newspaper The Mainichi in Japan. And his yarns, says Williams in his prefaces, "are believed to be historically accurate." Certainly they are entertaining.

AIMING AT the huge potential audience created by television's "The Six Wives of Henry VIII" and a forthcoming movie production, also starring Keith Mitchell, Beagle Books has brought out six historical novels in paperback on Henry's wives, at 95 cents per wife. Julia Hamilton, Margaret Heys, Frances Clark, Jessica Smith and Jean Evans are the authors.

"YAZOO" by Willie Morris, the former Harper's magazine editor, a book compared by some to James Agee's "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men" as a social document, has been reprinted in paperback by Ballantine Books.

A KILLING IN MALTA by Noah Webster; Doubleday, 177 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

British civil servant extraordinaire Jonathan Gaunt made his debut in "Flickering Death," and herewith returns for the first of many likely encores.

This time Gaunt's assignment takes him to Maltaas the guardian of a royal Scottish sword to be displayed at an international trade fair. Once on Malta, Gaunt finds himself involved with the young local nationalists, two rival smuggling factions, a retired British judge suspected of being a smuggler himself, assorted shady business men, his own ex-wife, and a pretty young Maltese girl assigned to be his escort.

The mystery element is very thin, but the action is often furious. Characterization is slight, but the Maltese background quite good. And the royal sword plays a disappointingly minor role in the proceedings. Summed up: A so-so Crime Club Selection that will neither tingle your nerve-endings nor put you to sleep.

Some New Books For The Juniors

How The Beasts And The Birds Communicate And Comprehend

Alexander Key, North Carolinan and ardent conservationist, has specialized in a distinctive genre of fiction for young readers that he has staked out for himself — stories set in the future, pitting animals and their human and humane friends against the destructive forces of progress and the thoughtless, and touching upon the more mysterious powers of God's creatures.

"The Golden Enemy," "The Incredible Tide" and "The Forgotten Door" have been such stories.

Now in "The Strange White Doves," Key switches from fiction to non-fiction. But his basic concerns remain unchanged. He is still championing animals against their enemies, and he is still interested in the behavioral patterns of beasts and birds, and particularly their means of communication and comprehension.

Key subtitles his book "True Mysteries of Nature," and cites evidence that hascaused him to conclude that animals share a "Pool of Knowledge" of which man is unaware, but from which, if tapped, he could benefit immensely.

In this $4.25, Westminster Press-published book, you read of animal accomplishments that man has long attempted to explain as instinct or coincidence, but which Key attributes to "a sort of psychic information center located within easy reach of every living thing . . . like a vast memory bank."

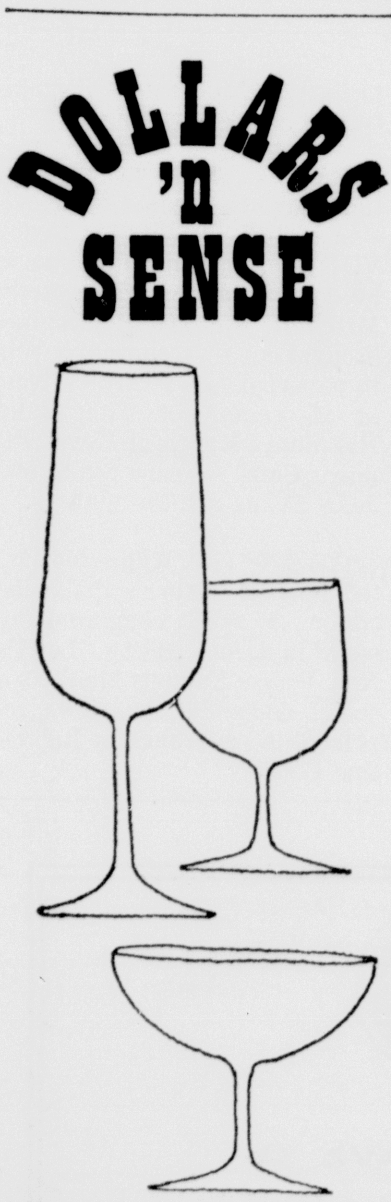

It is a controversial theory at which many — even most — authorities will scoff. But thoughtful youngsters, especially those with an affinity for the four-footed and feathered creatures, will find it intriguing and perhaps even convincing.

Some other new books for the juniors:

A second, revised edition of "Point to the Stars" (McGraw-Hill, $4.72) by Joseph M. Joseph and Sarah Lee Lippincott has just appeared to woo new converts to the fun and satisfaction of stargazing. This is the guide the Library Journal described as "precise, excellent. . .useful addition to astronomy shelves." The principal addition is a series of tables showing planet positions against the constellations for the next four years, since the original tables are now outdated. It is intended for use outdoors, and that use is by no means limited to the children in the family. Mom and dad can enjoy a little amateur astronomy as well.

"Dragonflies" (Viking, $4.95), text and illustrations by Hilda Simon, a veteran and skilled producer of such books, takes young readers on a field trip to observe one of the most fascinating of the inhabitants of the insect world. Miss Simon tells the life story of the dragonfly simply and generally appealingly, only occasionally lapsing into textbookish terms and phrases. And her artwork demonstrates vividly the beauty of these insects, as well as the complexity and the mystery of their life cycles. A good choice for the child with a natural bent for nature and its insects.

The average sports fan's repertoire of poems about sports consists of the Mighty Casey of Mudville shame, and not much else. But a great deal of other poetry has been written about sports, as Alice Fleming proves with her collection "Hosannah the Home Run!" (Little, Brown, $4.95). Such varied verse-makers as Gregory Corso, Carl Sandberg, Ogden Nash, Walt Whitman, basketball player Tom Meschery, and even Virgil and Lord Byron have celebrated athletics and athletes through their work. And the sports covered include not only baseball, football and basketball, but crew, tennis, sailing, swimming, boxing and a host of other games as well. Most young boys, no doubt, would still rather play the games than read about them. But it's a valiant and clever effort at tempting them into the poetry-reading ranks.

Aimed at enticing the smaller children into the joys of bird-watching is "Dougal Looks for Birds" (Four Winds, $4.95) by Martha Bennett Stiles. It details the adventures of young Dougal and his parents on a trek in search of the elusive heron —a hunt into which Dougal's imaginary parakeet persists in intruding. It is good humored fun with some sly education. And Iris Schweitzer's four-color illustrations get into the spirit of things. They are merry, witty depictions of the goings-on.

Young ones who first met up with pals Frog and Toad in Arnold Lobel's "Frog and Toad Are Friends" can enjoy them again in another Harper and Row "And I Can Read Book," this one entitled "Frog and Toad Together" ($2.50). For ages 4 through 8, spins another series of five fun-filled stories that the small ones will be returning to again and again.

Not all, however. A notable exception was the judges first choice: Robert C. O'Brien's "Mrs Frisby and the Rats of NIMH" (Atheneum, $5.95). Mrs. Frisby — a sympathetic sort of mouse whose only fault is the bedraggled shawl she wears — comes upon a strange society of rats living under the rose bushes in the farmyard. Once imprisoned in a laboratory and treated with miracle drugs until their intelligence reached genius capacities, the community is armed with a purpose which embraces the most utopian ideals men have ever known.

Nor is there much cause for alarm in Zilpha Keatley Snyder's "The Headless Cupid" (Atheneum, $4.95). Teen-age Amanda's resentment of her newly remarried mother finds its outlet in an extravagant adoption of the occult.

This gives the author all sorts of opportunities to add Helpful Lessons about Divorce, and Younger Brothers, and Being Kind to Animals and One's Parents (in that order, it seems), and Life in General. The hanky-panky is only fitfully amusing, but at least there is a reassuringly normal air about the whole thing.

Not so with the other Newbery runners-up, Virginia Hamilton's "The Planet of Junior Brown" (Macmillan, $4.95) was definitely disturbing. This distinguished author has woven a rather unbelievable tale about two young blacks who for no discernible (nor, more importantly for its audience, justifiable) reason have been playing hookey from their eighth-grade class all term.

Miss Hamilton's incidental theme — of youths setting up temporary families for homeless children — is a moving one, but I found her condemnation — without-trial of society-at-large morally questionable. The whole seemed a fairly harmful exercise in introducing young readers to problems they never knew they had.

"Incident at Hawk's Hill" (Little, Brown, $5.95) was even more disturbing. Nature writer Allan Eckert's story concerns an actual episode from 1870, when a 6-year-old boy wandered away from his family's homestead and was cared for all summer by a wild badger.

The descriptions of animal habits and habitats are fascinating, and the lesson that only the fittest survive is clearly drawn — but author Eckert has done his job too well. The scenes of gratuitous and explicit violence — such as the bloody death battles between animals — end by turning the reader's stomach.

A Look At The Prize-Winners: Numbing Sense Of Desolation

By JENNIFER FARLEY SMITH

A preoccupation with loneliness seems the order of the day for many children's books. Youngsters are unwanted and abandoned by parents, stolen away and terrorized by supernatural forces, or lost and battling for survival in nature.

The result is usually no swashbuckling adventure (with its reassuring soupcon of fantasy) but a numbing sense of desolation. Even a gold or silver medal on the book jacket no longer assures a GP rating on the material within.

The year's Newbery Medals reflected this trend. Wrapped in a rather threadbare "relevance," many award-winners portrayed bleak worlds for children to live in.

ON 'PRO' SIDE OF THE NATURAL FOOD ARGUMENT

NATURE'S MIRACLE MEDICINE CHEST by C. Edward Burtis; Arco, 170 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

For every book boosting the merits of "natural foods" there is another book denouncing the movement as a fad or hoax. And thus the argument goes on, leaving readers often confused as to their own beliefs, feeling gullible if they accept the claims and cynical if they reject them — fearful, too, that they might be passing up an opportunity for better health.

There is no question which side of the controversy C. Edward Burtis has chosen. He is a believer, and his "Nature's Miracle Medicine Chest" extolls the virtues of such "natural foods" favorites as honey, papaya, kelp, carrot juice, garlic, sesame seeds, yeast and yogurt.

Burtis calls the roll, and tells you what each "wonder food" is good for. "Nature has been more than generous in her many dispensations, and never more so than in the contents of her own medicine chest," claim Burtis.

What is missing from the book are the specifics of author Burtis' qualifications (an earlier Burtis book, "The Fountain of Youth," has just been reprinted in paperback by Arco), other than the publisher's statement that he is "a noted nutritionist." Professional medical men are not likely to be impressed with Burtis' easy-going documentation of laboratory experiements and patient cures. And even some of Burtis' fellow advocates of a natural diet may feel he is sometimes overly-enthusiastic in his claims.

But still — the thesis that the simpler less-refined foods are best for man's general well-being seems to make sense. Burtis' confidence is infectious. And it is to be noted that the supermarkets, practicing the adage of joining those you can't defeat, are stocking more and more natural foods on their own shelves, even when they have to push the processed cereal boxes together a bit tighter to make room for the raw wheat germ.

A NEW USE FOR THOSE OLD TIRES

By EARL ARONSON

What can you do with old tires except make bumpers for your boat dock or lay them on the football field to help backs with their running pattern?

Some day, discarded tires — a serious pollutant — may help your garden grow.

A series of experiments in which ground-up rubber particles were mixed with soil in varying percentages was described at a recent convention of Southern agricultural workers by Mississippi State University researchers.

Soybeans were used because studies had shown they were sensitive to toxic elements. Rubber was mixed with soil in amounts of 1 to 10 per cent by weight.

The old tires may help solve a critical problem — how to get crops above ground more rapidly to ensure a successful harvest. The tests showed the higher percentage of rubber used, the scientists said, the faster the plants emerged from the ground.

They said the soybeans planted in soil with a 5 to 10 per cent rubber mixture emerged "significantly faster" than those grown with less rubber.

Plants grown in soil with larger amounts of rubber were several inches shorter than the others. (This might help, shorter plants being less susceptible to wind damage.)

The plants showed no visible abnormalities. Earlier experiments in a greenhouse showed toxicity from the rubber's zinc oxide, plant abnormalities and even deaths.

Other benefits listed were that winter weeds died off soon after the rubber particles were mixed into the soil, during the period of greatest toxicity. Since farmers are replacing galvanized irrigation and watering pipes with plastic, rubber might help maintain the zinc oxide content of animal and food products, which have been reduced.

The researchers, Drs. Rollin C. Glenn and C. Y. Ward, said a similar experiment was underway with winter wheat. The work is sponsored by the U.S. Rubber Reclaiming Co. of Vicksburg, Miss.

About two million old tires now litter the nation, it is estimated, with 200 million more added yearly.

You can't recycle this refuse as you can paper, glass and metal. Buried tires somehow slither back to the surface and burning them produces an oil, polluting smoke. About 10 per cent of old tires are reclaimed each year, for highway construction use, street paving and other projects.

The Late Summer Perk-Up

With August just around the corner, Marin gardeners are also confronted with that annual late summer crisis — the time of the year when their garden begins to succumb to prolonged drouth and warm weather, and to take on a dry, drab look.

The best remedy for these late season doldrums is a perk-up of in-flower annuals chosen from among the many bedding plants available at our nurseries.

DWARF MARIGOLDS are often already in bloom in nursery flats and the transplants instantly add beauty to the garden. The creams, yellows, golds and oranges of the hybrid varieties are truly spectacular as edgings, in borders or massed beds.

Other bedders to brighten the summer garden are brilliant red salvia (scarlet sage), orange or red cockscomb, and any of several zinnias.

Zinnias offer plenteous blooms in noticeable colors, and the flower forms of individual types are as fascinating as they are beautiful. The wee Thumbelian Zinnias have captivated Californians since their recent introduction — and the taller-growing favorites still are permanent fixtures in gardens throughout the state.

Silver-dollar size dwarf dahlias are excellent choices for warm weather, as are the vincas — or periwinkles. The Little Pinkie variety, with lavender pink flowers, and Bright Eyes, a white with a reddish eye, love the heat and stand up under it beautifully.

Portulaca (moss rose) forms a multi-colored carpet that seems to bloom endlessly in summer and, of course, the rose, purple and white alyssum varieties provide a bounty of color to enjoy.

LOW MOUNDS of blue ageratum highlight any setting. This charmer contrasts nicely with a multitude of other colorful choices in the hot season.

Don't overlook the possibilities offered by petunias. The individual members of this huge family will amaze you and please all who view the elegant and far-ranging colors, and delightful flower forms.

In morning sun, or partial shade, the fibrous begonias are standouts. There are white, red or pink-blooming varieties, in dwarf and intermediate-growing heights. Some have appealing apple green foliage, others are distinguished by appealing reddish-mahogany leaves.

PETUNIAS are one of the best bets for a quick and welcome flush of color in the mid or late-summer garden when bloom becomes scare. It's a large family with a multitude of colors and flower forms. One of the most famous is the 1972 All-American selection, the Circus, shown here. Its bloom is a mixture of deep salmon and white, and its flower form a lovely double. Its compact growth makes it ideal for containers or mass plantings.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔Feed your roses, water them deeply and spray them regularly to enjoy the maximum of summer bloom. A mulch around the plants will conserve precious moisture.

✔Feed dahlias frequently. Some hobbyists say twice a month isn't too much. Use a complete fertilizer of fish emulsion.

✔Heat-loving annuals such as zinnias, periwinkle, salvia, dwarf dahlias and celosia can be set-out now for color in short order. Plants already in bloom in nursery containers, are to be found in full flower, enabling you to create instant beauty in your garden.

✔This is the time to plant perennial flower seed if you would enjoy their blooms next year. Sow seed now for delphinium, penstemon, sweet william, columbine and coreopsis.

Do-It-Yourself Concept Gains

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

It's become easier nd easier to develop your own decorating concepts.

Manufacturers know that some of the most important words in our decorating vocabulary are: "Do it yourself." In the home furnishings trade they've got the idea down to initials DIY, and those three little initials represent dollars on the retailers' account books.

Even if you never actually make furniture or accessories from scratch, there's plenty of decision-making involved in just buying and putting together a roomful of possessions. And it's in the area of developing a decorative theme for a room that one sees a wealth of beautifully designed and coordinated products.

Pick a theme. Bamboo and treillage. Vines and strawberries, Black Watch plaids and tweeds. Natural woods, animals and earthy colors. Americana and country-western. The Napoleonic bee and French toile.

WH ATEVER the choice there's something in the fabric and furniture departments of stores to help you execute that theme.

Professional designers can still be called upon to help solve problems. In fact, the pros are more readily accessible now that fine stores realize the value of the trained staffer.

Don't hesitate to seek advice from store decorators. That's why they're there.

THE ROOM shown here is an example of how a professional designer pulled together ready-made and do-it-yourself merchandise. Robert Houseman wanted to create a round-the-clock room that would work as a living room, yet would double as guest room. And space was tight.

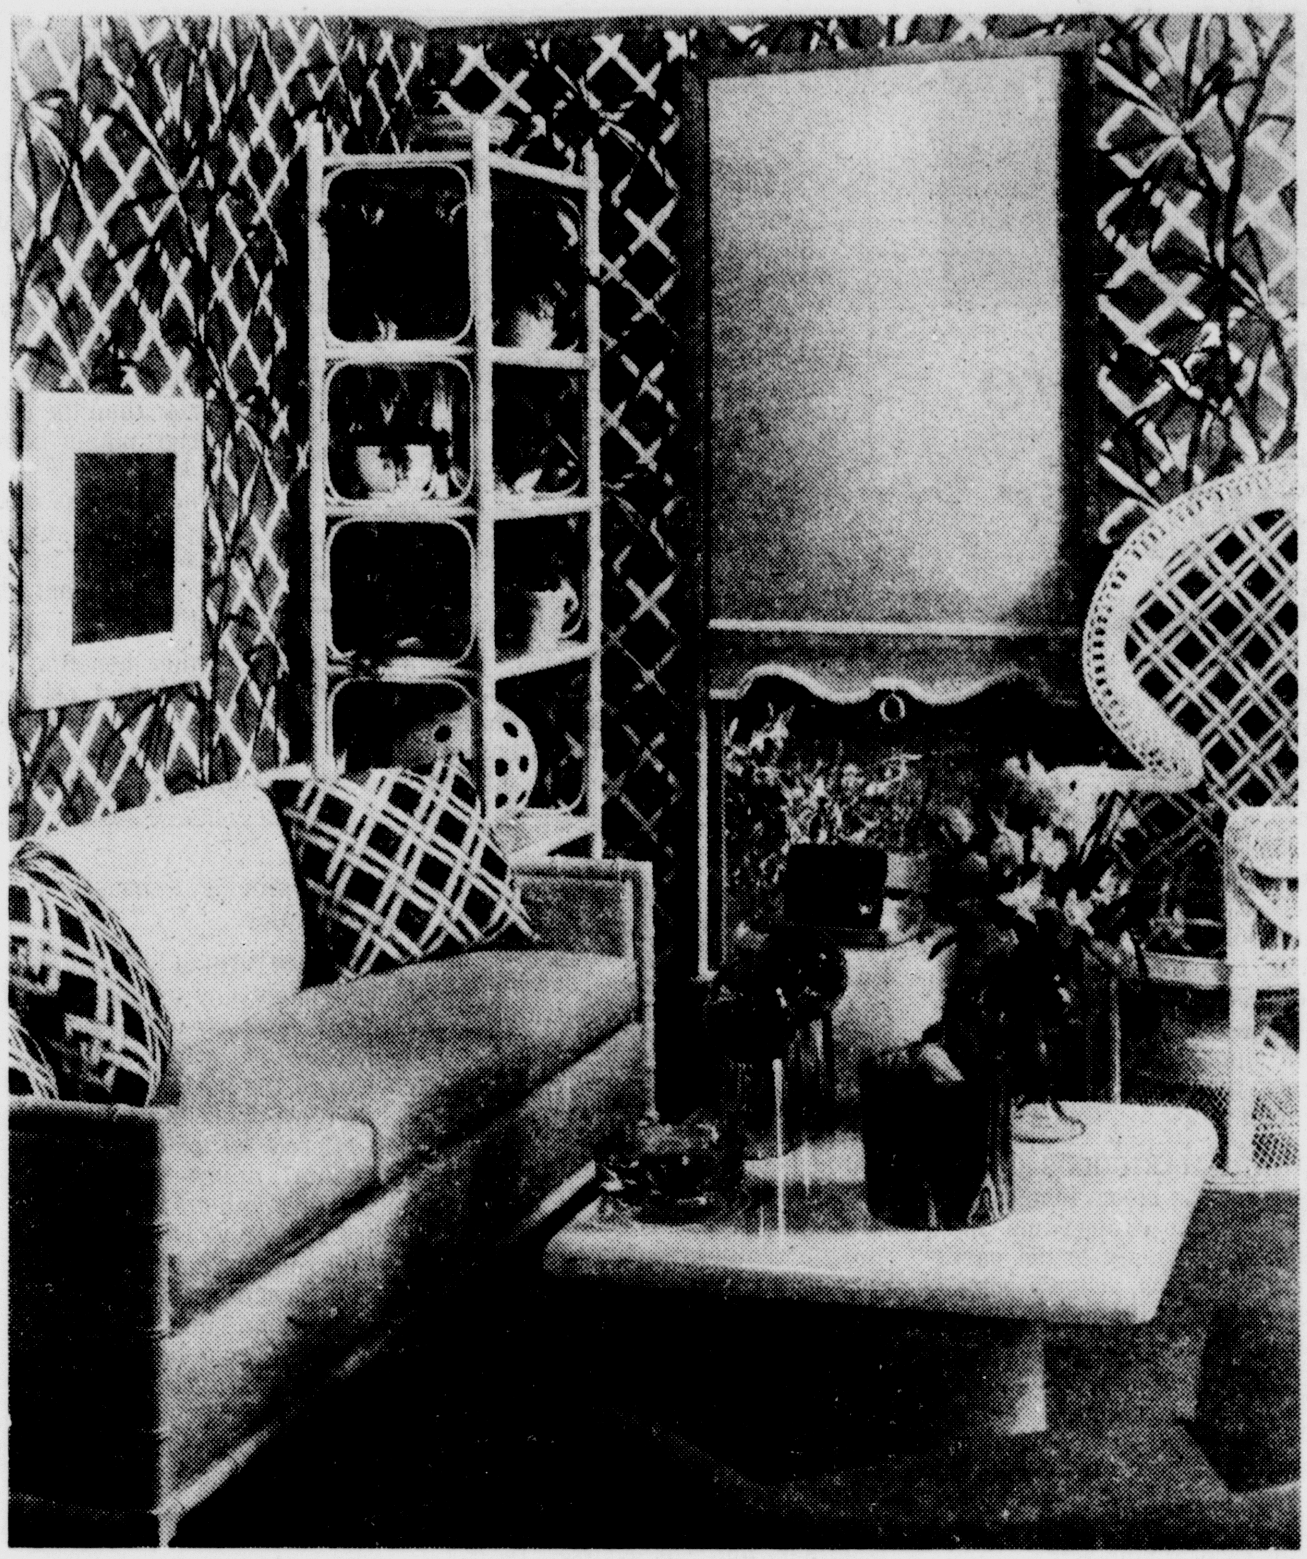

Deciding to skip draperies because they might make the room appear to shrink in size, he chose to make the walls the predominant pattern-provider. Finding a blue, parrot green and white treillage motif, he built the rest of the room on that theme.

The next consideration was a sleep sofa, and he found one with a mock-bamboo framing. Then the etagere in bamboo seemed a natural choice, giving height and providing lots more storage and shelf room than a regular bedside table.

Next he chose a sky blue window shade cloth called Glastique Tontine. This he trimmed with crisp white Conso braids and fringe.

FINALLY, THE handsome rajah chair in wicker was added with a contemporary plastic table and comfortable swivel chair in green.

The resulting room is surprisingly "spacious." Yet nothing in it is hard to come by.

THIS ROOM, carefree yet rugged in appearance, was put together by interior designer Robert Houseman, who developed a blue, green and white scheme, and even found colored shade cloth to match, demonstrating that high style is possible if you know where and how to shop.

EVERYTHING'S DUCKY AND WATER'S GREAT

Handyman's Pages

FOR YOUR own distinctive brand of water fun, build yourself this paddle-wheeled mallard that skims through the water with ease. It's rugged and unsinkable, thus making it safe and healthful water sport for all ages. And it is easier and rnore comfortable to ride than a bicycle, with a smooth pedal action, a delightful buoyancy and an amazing stability that causes it to glide over waters too shallow for conventional boats. There's a rudder that is easily operated. And to reverse direction, you need only to pedal backwards. Its construction is not too difficult, but to begin with you will want Steve Ellingson's step-by-step directions. Just send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Paddle Duck Pattern 440. The plan offers an alternate if you're not fond of ducks — a whale that also paddles. And there's a list of needed materials plus illustrations to simplify your work. Some other Ellingson projects to enrich your water recreation: No. 428, water bicycle, $1; No. 240, aquaplane, 75 cents, and No. 380, a 15-foot sailboat, $2.

A Versatile Deck Of Modular Squares

A handsome wood deck built recently in Santa Barbara can be duplicated readily in almost any yard space, large or small, because it's a highly versatile modular system.

Yet the average home handyman can build it.

This deck's checkerboard design looks far from simple, but it really is. The secret lies in four-by-four foot squares or pallets, which make up the entire deck, placed over a lumber gridwork.

SOME SQUARES may be left our in favor of trees and shrubs, fish pond or barbecue pit. These openings can be changed at any time to vary appearance and uses of the deck area.

Sections of the deck may be elevated to furnish contrast, or it all can be laid on one level, with benches and privacy screens or railings to bring in vertical visuals.

Lumber framing makes it possible to assure a level deck, regardless of the ground slope. Lengths of the posts can be adjusted from where they stand on concrete piers.

THE SQUARES are a snap to build. In fact, a homemade jig can speed up the job of turning them out.

Just saw four-by-eight foot panels of exterior grade plywood across the middle, cut western wood two-by-four inch lumber into four-foot lengths, then fasten the two-by-fours to the plywood squares with nails or screws driven from the panel side.

Leave a one-eighth inch gap between the side-by-side two-by-fours for drainage.

Soaking or brushing all wood parts with preservative before assembly will increase durability. If a color finish is desired, apply stain.

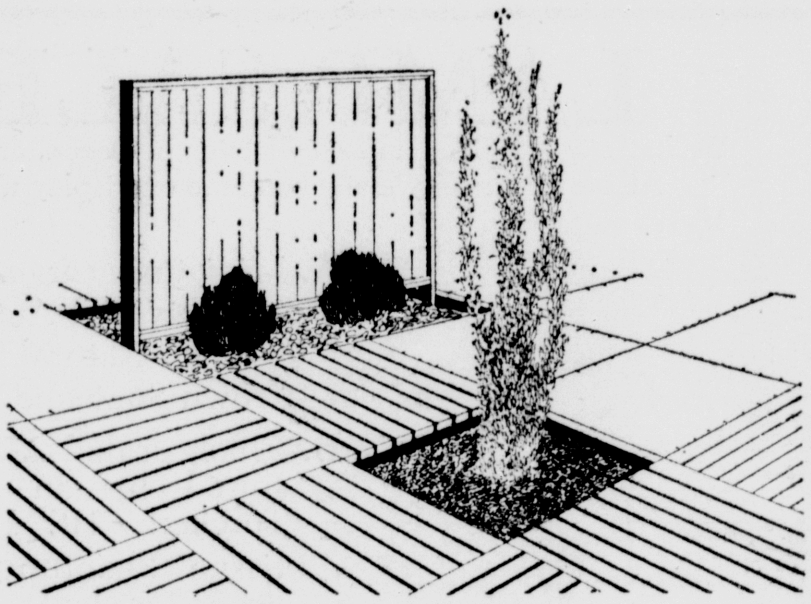

THE UNDERFRAMING is more difficult to build, but sturdiness is more important than neatness. The gridwork should provide four-sided support to all deck modules.

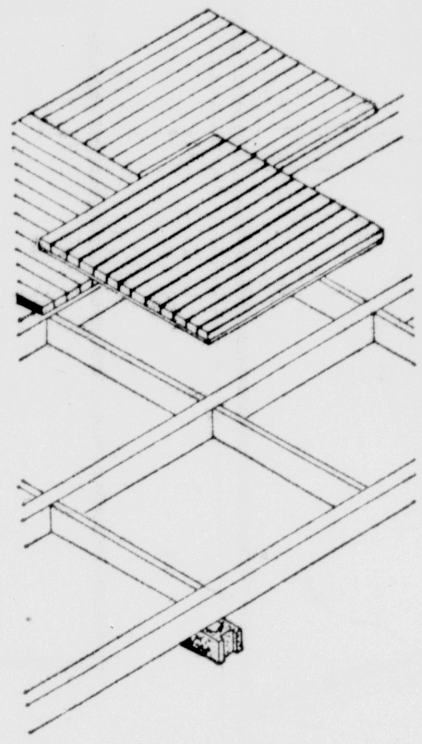

Basic to the gridwork are the "floor joists" built of four-by-four inch lumber, which will provide plenty of supporting edge around each panel.

The deck squares will butt against each other, but a trim of two-inch lumber can be applied wherever panel edges will show, around the deck perimeter and to line the openings left for plantings.

A FOLDOUT plans sheet details every step in building this modular deck, plus compatible all wood bench, screen and table. It includes both photographs and drawings, and a materials list.

For plans, write to Western Wood Products Assn., Department SBD, Yeon Building, Portland, Ore., 97204, and enclose 50 cents in coin.

THIS MODULAR DECK of wood, adaptable to any yard space or terrain, is relatively simple to build, as shown at right, using squares built of two-by-four lumber over half sheets of plywood resting on four-by-four grids, spaced at four-foot centers and leveled atop posts.

Help In Problem Solving

By ANDY LANG

Some tips on solving problems and easing chores around the home for the do-it-yourselfer:

For stripped threads in screw or bolt holes, fill the hole with plastic steel that comes in a tube, apply a thin coat of grease to the screw or bolt, then insert the screw or bolt and allow to harden.

Just before starting to paint, put a little glue in the center of an ordinary paper plate and set the paint container on it. The plate will keep the container from overturning, will catch any paint that runs down the side and makes a good place to rest the brush if you are using one. If you are using a roller, use a separate plate for the roller.

Don't throw away that collapsible gate you once used to keep your small son or daughter from falling down the stairs. Instead, paint it and use it outside as a trellis for roses.

If a screw refuses to turn counter-clockwise when you are trying to remove it, heat a soldering iron and hold it in the slot for a time. When the screw cools, it will come out easily.

After a wallpapering job, tack a couple of feet of leftover paper on the inside of a closet or storeroom. Then, if a time comes when a patch is needed, cut it from the leftover piece. Because it has aged the same as the regular paper, there won't be as great a difference as if you had cut the patch from rolled-up paper.

When it is necessary to sand the end of a dowel to a point, place the other end in the chuck of a portable electric drill and tighten it. The dowel then can be shaped by holding it against sandpaper while the drill is operating. The sandpaper must be backed by a wooden or metal block. (This will work only if the dowel is one-quarter inch or less in diameter, assuming you have a quarter-inch drill.)

When painting a room, also paint a small piece of wood. Carry the wood with you when you go shopping for darpes, curtains, slipcovers, etc.

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

IS INSTALLATION an important consideration in buying wall-to-wall carpeting for your home? You can bet it is. Doing it yourself just isn't practical to protect your carpet investment.

Having it done right by experts benefits you in many ways. Our technicians use equipment you haven't even thought of — for instance, stretchers to pull the carpet tight at every point. This makes the carpet fit tightly and snugly, without any bubbles or loose areas that look bad and can scuff or wear unnecessarily.

Expert cutting and stretching also saves you money. It eliminates waste — important when you pay by the yard. Correct joining of different carpets in connecting rooms, or where rooms and hallways join, is another mark of the professionally installed broadloom.

The proper cutting and fitting of the right carpet pad, quality tackless stripping, attractive metal edging where carpets join hard surface flooring — all of these come into the installment picture . . . so leave it to the experts.

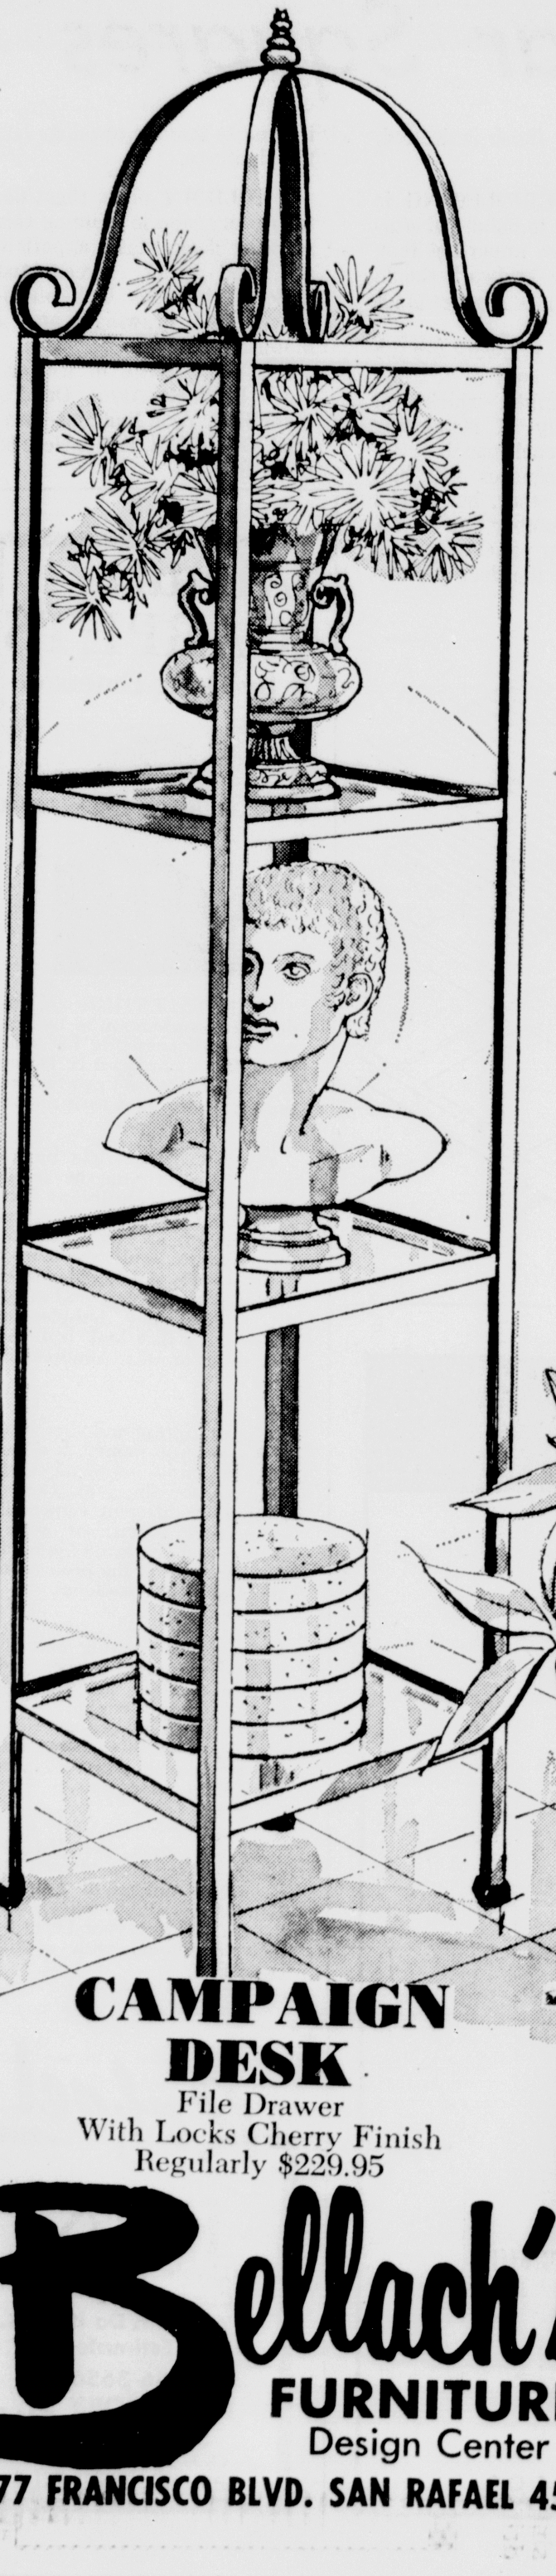

We are carpet specialists, in every phase from display to decorative advice to flawless installation and service after the sale. Select your beautiful new broadloom with confidence, at

ON THE STEREO SCENE — BY ANGEL

By JOHN SUNIER

Some more album releases from Angel:

"LISZT & BUSONI IMPROVISATIONS" — John Ogdon, piano — Seraphim S-60088: "THE MEPHISTO WALTZ & OTHER SATANIC PIANO MUSIC LISZT" — Angel Seraphim S-60170:

British pianist Ogden is a perfect choice for these brilliant and mostly not-often-heard miniatures from the super-Romantic period of music.

Operatic fantasies for the piano are not popular today, because among other reasons we have the complete actual operas at our fingertips wherever we want to hear them.But composers put much artistry and excitement into such pieces as Busoni's "Chamber Fantasy on Bizet's "Carmen," "Turandot's Boudoir," or Liszt's "Reminiscences of 'Don Giovanni'." Busoni's "Nine Variations on a Chopin Prelude" is also a masterpiece.

On the all-Liszt album, Ogden shows the jiabolical side of the composer many feel to have been the greatest pianist ever. Here is the "Mephisto Waltz No. 1" again, gaining new ground through its use in the motion picture of the same name, as well as the "Mephisto Waltz No. 3." The "Funerailles" are included, and a weirdly pyrotechnical "Czardas Macabre."

TCHAIKOVSKY: "Francesca da Rimini"; "Hamlet" — USSR Symphony Orchestra/ Svetlanov - Angel Melodiya: SR-40167:

Speaking of the diabolical, Tchaikovsky's descent into Dante's Inferno to visit the unfortunate Francesca and her lover retains the ability to raise a few hackles on one's neck in a truly infernal performance. This one, sad to say, is not quite it. I still prefer Stoky's.

"Hamlet" fares better, though the overall sound of this LP is rather dull.

"FOUR RUSSIAN RARITIES FOR PIANO AND ORCHESTA" - Rimsky-Korsakov: "Concerto in C Sharp Minor"; "Fantasia in A"; Tchaikovsky: "Piano Concerto No. 3 in E Flat"; "Allegro in C" — Igor Zhukov, piano/Moscow Radio Symphony Orchestra/ Rozhdestvensky and Yurovsky - Melodiya Angel SR-40188:

The Rimsky-Korsakov is nice to have in good stereo sound; it's an enjoyable piece. The Scriabin was once available in its original two-piano version, but this is its first with orchestra. The Third Tchaikovsky Concerto has received several recordings lately, but this one is excellent.

As for the other two-minute Tchaikovsky piece, why bother?

ERIK SATIE: "Mercure" (ballet); "Socrate" (symphonic drama) - Mesple/Guiot/Esposito/Millet/Orchestre de Paris/Pierre Dervaux —

Hello again, Erik Satie! This is a first for the music-hallish little ballet, which would be a good companion to "Parade."

Though by its subtitle "Socrate" sounds like a massive composition with large forces, it is actually a very simple, spare work, with the words of Plato sung in melody lines much like human speech against a very modest instrumental accompaniment. The wrods are what the whole structure becomes, and repeated listening will uncover surpassing beauties in the way they are presented. Many authorities consider this the eccentric French composer's masterpiece.

The album includes a complete translation of the French and soundwise is first-rate.

"THE ART OF DENNIS BRAIN, VOLUME 3" — Mozart: "Divertimento No. 14 in B Flat"; IBERT: "Trois pieces breves;" — JACOB: "Sextet" Dennis Brain, French horn, and others — Seraphim 60169:

With less than 10 per cent of records now sold in the mono category, let us hope that transcendent recordings such as these will never be lost just because they are not stereo. Termed the greatest horn player of all time, Brain was killed in an auto accident at the age of 36, but his magnificent artistry lives on today via Angel's many re-releases of his music. The Jacob's "Sextet" is the major work here, a fine piece of modern British chamber music.

PAGANINI: "Violin Concerto No. 1 in D"; SARASATE: "Carmen Fantasy" - Itzhak Perlman, violin/Royal Philharmonic Orchestra/Lawrence Foster - Angel S-36836:

This is the Angel debut of the talented 26-year-old violinist originally from Israel. Both works selected are super-virtuosic and demand staggering technical skills, which Perlman brings off with little difficulty. There are so many Carmen fantasies that more than a whole evening of music would result if they were all performed at one sitting, but Sarasate's has some interesting twists and matches the Paganini work for demanding dexterity of bow and fingers. State-of-the-art stereophonics.

COCOA, a coati-mundi, surveys the desert in search of his archaeologist friend, Charlie Crowfoot, in "Charlie Crowfoot and the Coati-Mundi," an animal adventure to be repeated on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

"Liza with a Z" is a one-hour NBC special for Sept. 10 starring Liza Minelli in a display of her various musical comedy talents. She sings various solos and works with a dance company.

You'll hear no raps against football from the announcing clan. CBS employ 21 announcers to cover its National Football League games this fall.

"The Sixth Sense" series that ABC introduced at mid-season as replacement for a cancelled program has been renewed for the coming season with Gary Collins continuing as star.

In a forthcoming "Marcus Welby, M.D." episode on ABC, Margaret O'Brien will be acting with star Robert Young for the first time since 1942 when, aged 5, she was launched as one of the biggest of child stars through appearing with him in the movie, "Journey for Margaret."

Viacom Enterprises has in preparation a half-hour situation comedy series, "Dangerfield's", starring, of course, nightclub comedian and operator Rodney Dangerfield whose humor theme is that he gets no respect from anyone. The series will be in that vein.

One of the items on the 1972-73 "Hallmark Hall of Fame" schedule of dramatic specials for NBC will be an adaptation of a Paul Gallico short story, "The Small Miracle," tale of an Italian orphan boy who relies on St. Francis of Assisi for help when his donkey becomes ill. Playwright John Patrick will write the script, and production will begin late this summer in Rome and Assisi.

Vincent Price was awarded the first Distinguished Man of the Year Award at Columbia College in Columbia, Mo.

David L. Wolper will produce a television special based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning musical "Of Thee I Sing."

Kid Commercials Provoke Debate

By ALAN BUNCE

Big changes in television commercials for children — a subject caught in the recent crossfire between broadcasters and reformers — have been promised from what could be the most significant source of all — the advertisers themselves.

The proposed steps would:

Urge children to seek parental guidance rather than pressuring their parents to buy the advertised product.

Avoid capitalizing on "a child's difficulty in distinguishing between the real and unreal."

When demonstrating products, stick to ways that "can be readily duplicated by the average child for whom the product is intended."

THESE ARE some of the new guidelines offered to makers of commercials by the Assn. of National Advertisers whose members place some 75 per cent of the national ads aimed at youngsters.

Challengers are already branding the new rules a toothless and empty publicity gesture. Even ANA's president, Peter Allport, admits "the ANA does not have — and should not have — the power of enforcement. We depend on moral persuasion. Some say this won't work. I think we see it working around us every day."

Meanwhile, other more drastic proposals for curtailing TV commercials for children are still pending. Among the petitions with which Action for Children's Television has been bombarding the Federal Communications Commission in recent years is one that would ban all advertising on shows for children. The FCC is yet to rule on that request.

ALLPORT WAS unable to say how much of a departure, compared with current TV advertising, is represented by the ANA action —unveiled in "Children's, Television Advertising Guidelines," a six-page folder sent not only to ANA members but to non-members who handle children's commercials.

"We don't have any data indicating how many present commercials fall outside the guidelines," he remarked.

Although stated in highly general terms, the new rules — taken at face value — seem to preclude many of the commercials currently airing over TV networks.

But how about those vitamins that get such a hard sell during children's hours, for instance? They're offered in the form of candies and other child-oriented shapes. But once in the home, parents may be astonished to see "keep out of the reach of children" on the label. Would this kind of commercial leave the air?

NOT FOR A while, if at all. The new standards apply only to commercials produced after July 6.

"A year from now we'll be able to look back on the commercials made under these guidelines," says Jerry Souers of Mattel Inc.

Reformers who have been directing their fire against misleading commercials on children's programs are far from satisfied. One of the most visible groups — Action for Children's Television, based near Boston — summarily dismisses the move.

"ACT disagrees with the basic previse of the Assn. of National Advertisers guidelines," goes their statement of response. "We believe that children are never the appropriate target of an advertising campaign. Moreover, the new guidelines will not change what children see on television.

"VIRTUALLY ALL TV commercials now aimed at children can continue to appear. The guidelines are filled with rhetoric which does not protect our children but rather protects the advertisers and broadcasters as they continue to manipulate and exploit our children."

The objections of most industry critics, however, center not on the basic thrust of the new rules, but on the alleged unlikeliness of the implementation. In announcing the new policy, a panel of ANA members were unwilling to acknowledge anything in the past performance of TV advertisers that might have called for such changes.

"There is no evidence that children have been damaged by the advertising that has been going on for 25 years," said F. Kent Mitchel, chairman of the special task group that developed the guidelines.

SINCE THE standards have been announced at a time when TV advertisers are under attack from several quarters, some observers feel the move is an effort by the industry to avoid legislation in this field. "We obviously hope — as is true of any self-regulating operation — it will obviate any need for legislation," Allport concedes.

The Senate consumer subcommittee heard testimony from children, revealing that eventually some TV commercials provoke resentment and skepticism. Chairman Sen. Frank E. Moss (D) of Utah wants a national institute to research the effects of advertising on all of the American society.

Meanwhile, the National Assn. of Broadcasters has issued new rules limiting the number of commercial minutes per hour allowed on many children's programs, even though the limit still allows far more than during adult prime time.

"I'M SORRY TO HEAR OF YOUR TROUBLE. . ."

How I ache to share with you the burden of your agony, to cradle your hurt and shock and despair against this breast that cares so deeply and yearns so to offer solace and comfort.

But I have not the right to touch,
in body or in spirit,
though you be my life's longing.
I must shield my eyes from you,
as they betray my love so blatantly and with unmistakable strength and fervor

And I have the "freedom"
but to parrot trite phrases that offer no real comfort:
God forbid that I should reveal my love or my soul!

How lonely honor can be, and how deceitful!

NOVATO — ANN MORF

OLD LILAC AND TULIP TREES

Old lilac and tulip trees
Are again in full bloom;
Each brushing against the other
Like old friends greeting once a year —
In familiar fragrant whispers.

FAIRFAX — DOROTHY LYNN
